The Old Catskills, If We Really Thought, Dynamite and Hailstones, Free Your Emotions.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THIS IS WRITTEN in the Catskill Mountains, where Rip Van Winkle had his long sleep and where, some day, many millions will find a glorious summer playground. Here are 1,000 natural landing fields, on the ends of sloping mountains, 40 minutes' flight from the 10,000,000 people that live in and around New York city.

Groups of little mountains, 2,000 to 3,500 feet high, beautifully green, and waiting for millions that will come.

The 1,250,000 children and 36,000 teachers, just released from New York city's public schools, might to be here, and real civilization will find a way to send them, instead of leaving them in hot New York. There could be no better place for old men and women to spend their last years, looking east toward the troubled Atlantic and worrying Europe, and west, across broad America, toward the Pacific and mysterious, uncertain Asia, they, themselves, at peace in this happiest of nations.

IF MEN WERE really thinkers, their minds would be fixed on the immensity of the universe, the smallness of this little green globe, the certainty of death, and the uncertainty of what lies beyond. But we are little inhabitants of a small planet and little things interest us.

LIGHTNING struck a boat, carrying dynamite, off Cockburn Island, in the St. Lawrence, killing 30, blowing the big $100,000 boat to splinters. We like to read about that.

At St. John's, Newfoundland, windows, roofs were broken; animals killed by hailstones weighing 10 pounds each. We've heard of hailstones as big as hen's eggs, but not as big as hens. That interests 1,000,000 of us where Einstein interests one.

THE LEARNED DR. W. J. MAYO, earth's greatest surgeon, able to remove anything you have, except your citizenship and your complexes, warns you that restraining your emotions is bad for your heart. Every time your mind interferes to check your instinctive impulses, the heart suffers. That will encourage modern young people, increasing their expectation of long life.

When you suddenly jam on your four-wheel brakes, your tires suffer. So with your heart, when you suddenly apply your will and control the emotions, which are your driving power.

"PRE-CUT MEATS," beef, mutton, pork carcasses, cut, ready for consumers' use, in the packing house, not in local butcher shops, interest retailers of food.

Swift & Co. are experimenting with the new idea, introduced by Mr. Chester, president of the General Food Company, in connection with sudden freezing, in transparent packages, at extremely low temperatures. Meats thus pre-cut and frozen are said to last indefinitely, losing none of their quality. This means much to retail stores that have found it undesirable or impossible to deal in fresh meat and fish hitherto.

IT ALSO MEANS a new era for the retail butcher. Expert cutters, or cutting machines in packing houses, will do the minute butchering that has been done by thousands of individual butchers. Farmers might combine to cut and freeze their cattle, eliminating the big packer and long haul on the hoof.

MANY HIGH-SPIRITED Americans have lost their taste for stock gambling. On Wednesday, call money used for speculating, fell to one and a half per cent, lowest price in 17 years. When we tire of gambling, call money is cheap. Last summer call money went to 20 per cent.

The banker can sympathize with the farmer. Wheat and money both are drugs on the market.

CAPT. SAUL of the Southern Cross, can testify to man's progress in transportation. As navigator of the Southern Cross he flew the Atlantic in two days.

Some years ago he made his first Atlantic crossing in a square-rigged sailing vessel, and was six months on the journey.

In spite of that many still doubt that ocean air travel will ever "become practical."

Children of today will ask about "the old days, when people crossed the ocean on the water," as they now ask about stage coach days.

And those now living will cross to Europe for about $10.

Dry Director Here Says One 'Big Man' Blocked Him From Promised Dry Job

Commander John D. Pennington is in Pittsburgh again today, making plans to leave for Philadelphia, where he will take up his duties July 1 as director of prohibition enforcement of the Pennsylvania-Delaware-New Jersey area.

Returned from Washington, where he had expected to get a promised post as supervisor of alcohol permits, he said:

"Samuel O. Wynne had the support behind him that was needed. He was named supervisor of alcohol permits."

Refusing to mention names, Commander Pennington said "one big politician" was against him. Pressed further, he added that he was not from the Pittsburgh district.

Wynne was former prohibition director of the Philadelphia district and Pennington chief of this district. Due to the change of enforcement from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice, the new arrangement of districts will give the local head a much larger area for enforcement duties.

Wynne's new duties will keep him in the Treasury Department, with authority to supervise the granting of alcohol permits to industrial concerns, physicians, druggists and other permissible applicants.

Other Surprises in Police Shakeup; Elsner to Stay, Is Report; Faulkner Safe

The forced retirement on pension of Police Inspector John McArdle, of the South Side district, and the appointment of two new inspectors tops the list, according to reliable reports, of the long-anticipated upheaval in Mayor Kline's police force which will be announced Monday.

Capt. Dennis Hennessey, of the Seventeenth Ward, sponsored by Joseph G. Armstrong, who rose from patrolman to captain three years ago, succeeds Inspector McArdle, reports say.

Capt. Harry E. Moore, former police lieutenant of the North Side, now acting inspector of the Mt. Washington district and a protege of Henry Townsend, Twentieth Ward political leader, was permanently appointed to that district.

REMOVAL SURPRISE

The reported removal of McArdle comes as a surprise, although it had been said lately that the inspector and Commissioner Armstrong had severed political relations.

It had been previously reported by politicians that Inspector Joseph Elsner, of the Penn avenue district, would be the only police head to feel Mayor Kline's political ax. He apparently is safe now.

Police Lieutenants Phillip Senneway and John McFarland, both of the Eighteenth Ward, have been appointed captains, the for-

FEARED LADS' FISTS, SAYS OFFICIAL

Hartlep Had Seized Youths' Gloves and Equipment to Prevent 'Illegal' Game

Struck on the head by a baseball bat in the hands of William Hartlep, supervisor of North Side parks, Joseph Neiberding, 16, of 615 Sherman avenue, died today in the Presbyterian Hospital. A fracture of the skull caused his death, according to the report of the coroner.

Hartlep contends he acted in self-defense. He says he was afraid a crowd of boys following him would attack him for taking their baseball gloves and bat to keep them from playing in the park.

The dead youth's father, Joseph Neiberding, Sr., 42, tells a different story, declaring his son was struck on the head as he bent to pick up a baseball glove that had fallen to the ground. The father avers he has interviewed several of the boys who witnessed the affair and that they all tell the same story—that his boy was hit while bending over.

HELD FOR CORONER

Homicide detectives today were to take a statement from Hartlep, then turn him over to the coroner pending an inquest. Police at the North Side Station arrested the park official soon after young Neiberding had died of his injury.

According to the police, Supervisor Hartlep took the baseball bat, several gloves and a ball from the youths to stop them from playing on the park land. The boys followed, demanding their property, the original 10 players being joined by a score of others, Hartlep said today. He declared:

"I was afraid of being beaten by the gang. When the Neiberding boy struck at me, I raised

The Lindberghs may spend part of the summer in Maine, as the Morrow yacht, the Mouette, on which the Colonel and his bride spent their honeymoon, has been taken to Portland, Me.

COUNTY SHOWS 16 PCT. GAIN

Allegheny County has a population of 1,374,622, an increase of 16 per cent in 10 years, according to official preliminary census returns, made public today by J. E. Routley, supervisor for this district.

The city of Pittsburgh's total is 669,631 compared with 588,193 in 1920, an increase of nearly 14 per cent.

A considerable proportion of the city's increase was due to annexation of contiguous communities. The territory embraced in the present limits of the city had a population of 625,710 10 years ago, the official figures show.

CLAIRTON GAINS 41 PER CENT

Clairton jumped from 10,777 to 15,295 an increase of 41 per cent, due chiefly to the annexation of Wilson borough; McKeesport from 46,781 to 54,631 or 17 per cent;

Mackey Advocates Modification Of Blue Laws

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—(INS.)—Mayor Mackey today had joined the forces seeking repeal or modification of Pennsylvania's Blue Laws which, he said, result in $150,000 worth of trade going outside the city each week-end.

His remarks were made at a luncheon attended by members of the City Council and representatives of municipal welfare organizations. He urged all civic groups to work for modification of these laws.

There should be some attractions for the visitor and residents to enjoy over the week-end, he declared, adding:

"I am not trespassing against the sanctity of the Lord's Day in saying this."

B.

COMPROMISE ON PENSION LOOMS

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(INS.)—With the mirage of an early adjournment before them, administration leaders today hoped for a compromise of the controversy between President Hoover and Congress on World War pension legislation.

The President appeared likely to win in his efforts to keep the proposed cost within limits of the Treasury surplus. His spokesman, having won in the House, were hopeful of securing the Senate's approval of a pension bill, limiting relief of the World War veterans to a yearly average of $50,000,000 during the next three years.

The first test will come today in the Senate Finance Committee, considering the administration's measure and a $35,000,000 American Legion substitute. Reports were current the committee would report the administration bill favorably, since the American Legion had abandoned its own measure and was supporting the Presidential draft.

Hoot Gibson, Bride Start Honeymoon

HOLLYWOOD, June 28.—(INS.)—Edmund R. (Hoot) Gibson, cowboy motion picture star, was honeymooning somewhere in California today with his bride, the former Sally Eilers, screen actress.

More than 150 guests, many of them prominent in the motion picture colony, attended the wedding ceremony last night at the Baker ranch near Saugus. Carmen Pantages served as maid of honor and William Collier, Jr., was best man. The couple left after the ceremony for a secret destination.

Mears Plane Tuned To Start Globe Dash

NEW YORK, June 28.—(INS.)—John Henry Mears made final preparations today to take off early next week on his flight around the world against time. With Fred Melchoir as pilot, he hopes to circle the globe in less time than the Graf Zeppelin.

Champagne, a whole bottle of it, was used yesterday when Mrs. James J. Walker, wife of the mayor, christened the Mears plane City of New York.

Two Safes Resist Tools of Robbers

An acetylene torch, sledge hammers and chisels were used last night in an attempt to crack two safes belonging to the Automotive Construction Company, of 217 South Euclid avenue. As far as A. B. Entrance to the building was gained by breaking a side window.

Coolidge Articles to Start In Sun-Telegraph Tuesday

Calvin Coolidge, ex-president of the United States, is to write for the Sun-Telegraph.

His views on matters of interest will be printed on the first page, beginning Tuesday. There will be an article from Mr. Coolidge every day.

He is to have the widest latitude, writing on whatever seems to him interesting or important. With his background and experience, it is a safe assumption that whatever he writes will be well worth reading.

Mr. Coolidge wastes no words. He says nothing unless there is something to say. The consequence is that he is able to condense into a few paragraphs material that less talented writers would expand into a long article. His comments on current affairs will be terse, vigorous and pithy, but not cramped.

Betsy Ann Set for Race With Ohio Boat Today

CINCINNATI, June 28.—(AP.)—Gala days of steamboat traffic on the Ohio were revived today with the third annual race for supremacy of the river's packet boats.

Two stern wheelers, the Tom Greene, of Cincinnati, and the Betsy Ann, of Pittsburgh, were made ready to belch and churn their way up the stream in a contest that recalled the days when the river was the artery of travel through the Middle West.

Today's race is from Fernbank Dam, 12 miles below here, 21 miles upstream to Coney Island, a pleasure resort. As in other years, thousands were expected to line the banks while several hundred persons have secured passage on the boats themselves.

The Betsy Ann, piloted by Capt. Frederick Way, Jr., sought vengeance for last year's disputed victory of the Tom Greene, a larger and more powerful packet. The Tom Greene, commanded by the captain of the same name, was first to reach the finish line in a 22-mile race, but the shorter Betsy Ann was first to entirely cross the line.

In the first revival of packet racing three years ago, the Chris Greene, a sister ship of the Tom Greene, nosed out the Betsy Ann.

The race was scheduled to start at 2 p. m. and finish sometime after 4:30. Station WLW arranged to broadcast the affair while the National Broadcasting Company planned to tell of the duel from 4:30 to the finish.

FUNDS SLASHED, ENFORCEMENT BOARD MAY BE DOOMED

HOOVER SAYS WORK WILL CONTINUE

Private Funds Will Finance Commission, President Hopes; Desires $100,000

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Its work uncompleted, President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission today faced three alternatives as the result of action in the Senate.

It must operate as a prohibition investigating unit solely with limited funds, become partially a private organization operating on contributions, or disband.

George Akerson, chief secretary to President Hoover, announced that he had received offers from wealthy citizens to contribute funds so the commission can complete the work it originally intended. He would not reveal their identity.

This future for the commission was revealed as the result of the Senate's authorizing but a $50,000 appropriation for next year, directing at the same time, that the commission restrict its work to prohibition enforcement inquiry.

The House voted to do away with the commission entirely.

TWO COURSES OPEN

Now when the second deficiency bill, carrying authorization for the appropriation, goes to conference the conferees will have but two courses. They will agree on a measure continuing the commission with the $50,000 merely as a prohibition inquiry body as directed by the Senate, or adopt the House plan of doing away with the body.

The possibility of the commission's continuing its general law enforcement investigation work, however, arose when the President, informed of the Senate's action, served notice the commission would continue general work with outside financial aid.

"I have asked the commission to proceed with its full program of work," the President said when informed of the Senate's action, "and it has consented to do so. I have no doubt there are private citizens sufficiently anxious for the nation to know the whole truth as to what constructive remedies may be suggested by so eminent a body of men and women as this commission, that I shall be able to secure from private sources the $100,000 necessary to carry this work forward to completion."

WASTING MONEY CLAIM

The Senate's action came at the instance of Senator Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, who declared the commission was "wasting money," and that its work should be restricted to ascertaining a method of improving prohibition enforcement.

The Senate reversed itself to side with Glass. It first voted to give the commission $250,000 to continue general law enforcement investigation. Glass' move for a reconsideration, however, carried, and on the final vote the Senate voted, 35 to 30, to cut the commission appropriation to $50,000 and direct it to investigate prohibition enforcement laws.

The commission expects to have approximately $80,000 on hand from its original appropriation of $250,000 at the end of the fiscal year. This, with the additional $50,000 authorized by the Senate, would provide $130,000 for next year's work, limited to a dry law enforcement probe. The commission has estimated that $65,000 would be necessary for completion of its prohibition enforcement work alone.

vote. Their aggregate of ballots in the poll, 323, is more than 30 per cent of the 1,025 votes cast in the two boroughs at the May primary election.

Ballots filed in the poll by voters throughout the county total 55,693 in the latest tabulation and comprise five votes for repeal to each vote for enforcement. The total is made up of 77 per cent for repeal, 15 per cent for enforcement and 8 per cent for modification. The divisions are:

	Men.	Women.	Total.
Enforcement	4,782	3,794	8,576
Modification	2,747	1,528	4,275

will have the power of veto over Wynne, the commander said:

"The enforcement director does have the power of veto written into the law. I will be able to exercise that power when the granting of permits might seem unwise, improper or illegal, pending a court decision."

Asked to discuss the present condition of the Pittsburgh district from a prohibition viewpoint, Director Pennington said he would continue to direct enforcement in this district.

RETICENT ON NEW PLANS

Commander Pennington refused to state his opinion on the practicability of the law, which divides into distinct departments the two branches of prohibition enforcement—the alcohol permits and the enforcement. He refused to predict whether it would create conflict, or would become a practical and beneficial system.

With official and semi-official announcements made of assignments to new duties of executive members of the staff of Prohibition Administrator Pennington, under the Williamson bill, the question of great concern among the rank and file of dry workers in Pittsburgh is, "what about us?"

Those most likely to be affected are the employes of the permit department, which represents 35 per cent of the 200 dry workers in this district.

It is generally understood here that Wynne's headquarters will be in Philadelphia.

No word has been received as to whether any of those in the permissive department here will be transferred to Philadelphia or what provisions are planned by a branch office in Pittsburgh. Few changes are anticipated in the personnel of the prohibition agents and others in the enforcement unit, although a few transfers are anticipated among the agents.

There is much speculation among the legal staff of half dozen men as to what provisions have been made to take care of them. So far they have found no person who can enlighten them as to whether they will remain in the Treasury Department, be transferred to the Department of Justice, or be "let out."

The prize assignment in the Pittsburgh district went to R. E. Joyce, assistant administrator in charge of permits, who has been made an administrator in charge of permits in Ohio, Kentucky and Michigan district.

Mr. Joyce, who came to Pittsburgh during the administration of Fred C. Baird as prohibition administrator, has been in the government service 10 years.

Late yesterday Joyce was called to Washington, where he will confer with Dr. James Doran, commissioner, relative to his new duties.

Harold D. Wilson, assistant administrator, was out of town when announcement was made that he will remain here in charge of enforcement work.

'LEAGUE ARMY' STIRS DEBATE FOR TREATY

Adams, Stimson Deny Plan Discussed at London; Pact Flayed by Robinson

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Revelation of a secret document relative to a League of Nations army and navy, in the archives of the Navy Department, will have an important bearing on the discussion of the London treaty now before the Senate, it was evident here today.

Two cabinet officers have offered statements in explanation of the document, which was unconsciously revealed in a letter to Representative McClintic of Oklahoma. The letter had been sent last February by the then Acting Secretary of the Navy Jahncke, when Secretary Adams was with the American delegation at the London conference.

Secretary Stimson declared yesterday that no such proposal had been broached at the London parley by any American delegate and that the document in question was not part of the secret correspondence denied to the Senate by him.

ADAMS EXPLAINS

Secretary of the Navy Adams identified the secret document as part of the preparatory work to the Versailles treaty. Nevertheless, despite the fact that the document is now 12 years old, the Secretary categorically declined to make it public, and declared:

"The proposed plan for establishment of a league of nations army and navy is dated November 11, 1918. So far as this department knows, it was prepared as part of the data to be taken to Paris for the conference which resulted in the Versailles treaty of peace.

"No one of our delegates to the London conference knew of the existence of this document and no such project was ever discussed at London. It has remained a secret document here for about 12 years at the desire of those for whom it was prepared. As it has no possible bearing on the London conference or on the treaty now under consideration, I see no reason for giving it out now."

OPPONENTS STAND FIRM

Nevertheless opponents of the London treaty in the Senate have served notice that they will make every effort to see what influence, if any, this proposed league of nations military force had in the negotiations in London last spring.

For this purpose they will formally make a demand for the complete text of the document and what connection with the League of Nations organization, as it now exists, the plan had.

In a nation-wide radio address yesterday, Senator Arthur R. Robinson (Rep.), of Indiana, charged that the American delegation at the London disarmament conference accepted an international repartition of naval armament on the very basis which had caused another American delegation to quit the Geneva conference, three years before.

The Mosaic Templars, which planned to hold its convention in the city auditorium, telegraphed De Priest the gathering wil be held at Little Rock, Ark., because the management of the auditorium refused to lease it for a speech by the Negro congressman.

Inquiry Leads to Sinister Maze of Gang Intrigue; Call Lingle 'Go-Between'

Universal Service.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Investigation of the murder of Alfred J. Lingle, Chicago Tribune reporter, is leading today into a sinister maze of underworld intrigue.

It also involved the questioning of two sisters, one an attractive blonde. They are said to have been with Lingle the night before his death and were asked if they could threw any light on what became of a $9,000 roll of bills he had with him then.

PRESENT DOZEN MOTIVES

Among the latest reports made to the investigators were:

1—That the night of June 8, the day before Lingle's murder, "Joey" Josephs and Julian ("Potatoes") Kaufman had announced the opening of a gambling house closed since the St. Valentine's day, 1928, massacre and that Lingle had given warning that if the place was opened they would "see more police cars than they ever had seen before."

2—That the two promoters were reported to have incurred enmity by refusing to pay a "fee" of $15,000 or some similar large sum for the privilege of opening.

COMPLAINED OF RAID

3—That Lingle, after the Biltmore Athletic Club had been raided as a gambling resort three nights before his death, complained to an attache of the State's Attorney's office that the raid had "embarrassed" him, as he had given word for the promoters to "go ahead."

4—That Lingle was "in bad" with several dog race promoters for failing in his promise after giving assurance he could keep the tracks open.

5—That Lingle obtained "loans" as high as $20,000 from persons interested in gambling and dog-race promotion.

mer said to be taking the berth vacated by Capt. Moore in the newly-created police district, comprising the Mt. Washington, Overbrook and Carrick districts, and Moore will go into the South Side, vacated by Hennesey.

OTHER SHAKEUPS FADE

With the circulation of these reports, other rumors that a general shakeup of inspectors, including Inspector Charles Faulkner, of the North Side district, faded into oblivion.

It was further reported that Police Captain Anthony Block was to be made one of the new inspectors. This appointment, it was said, was checked by Robert Murray, Block's sponsor and chairman of the Twenty-third Ward. Murray, it is said, wanted to keep his appointment in his own district.

Under Mayor Kline's policy of "to the victor belongs the spoils," each of the 32 ward chairmen was permitted to select a specified number of new policemen and firemen from the 310 to be appointed today.

Usually ward chairmen have been allowed to name four or five firemen, and as a rule the Mayor allowed each to name one or more policemen to the allotted number of firemen.

DENIES THREATS MADE

The elder Neiberding's story, after talking to companions of his son, was:

"The boys followed the park man, not threatening him but after their own property. They had no intention of harming Hartlep. When a glove fell from his hand, my son stepped forward and bent over to pick it up. While he was bending over, Hartlep swung the bat and it struck him on the side of the head."

Hartlep and several other men in the park took the injured boy to the hospital, where he collapsed. Police were called but, after obtaining a report from Hartlep, they permitted him to go free. A charge of disorderly conduct, however, was placed against the injured youth.

POLICE SEEK 3 IN FATAL CRASH

Injured Trio Seen After Auto Upsets in Munhall; Boulevard Plunge Quiz On

One man was killed and three others are believed to have been injured early today when their automobile skidded and overturned on Hess' Hill, Duquesne road, Munhall. Police said the dead man was William Sargent, 25, of 188 Milford street, Duquesne. He was taken to the Homestead Hospital by Motorcycle Patrolmen Andrew Butko, of Mifflin Township police, and William Hawley, of Munhall police, but died en route.

Police began a search for three men who after the accident made their way to Homestead, where they procured a taxicab. One of the trio was suffering a crushed foot and was carried by his comrades, both of whom sustained lacerations, according to police.

DOCTORS DISAGREE

City physicians were unable to agree in their reports today on the sobriety of Philip Zuckerman, of 306 West General Robinson street, at the time of his arrest yesterday in connection with the fatal plunge of an automobile through the fence of the Boulevard of the Allies. The machine fell 150 feet to the Baltimore and Ohio tracks.

Dr. Daniel E. Sable, chief surgeon of the Public Safety Department, examined Zuckerman at the Center Avenue Police Station and pronounced him under the influence of liquor. Dr. Nathan Ashinsky, a city physician, of 2031 Center avenue, also examined Zuckerman, but his report stated that Zuckerman was not intoxicated. Zuckerman is held in $2,500 bail.

Mrs. Sadie Schnitzer, of 1331 Leetsdale street, mother of the two girls in Zuckerman's car, told Deputy Coroner John F. Aldisert today that Zuckerman showed no signs of drinking when he left her house with the two girls. Caroline Schnitzer, 14, declared Zuckerman's car was not the one that sideswiped and forced the other over the cliff.

Police say it was Zuckerman's machine that sideswiped the car of Early Hayman, 55, of 12 Vancouver street, Ingram, and forced it through the fence. Mrs. Ella Hayman, 45, suffered injuries which caused her death three hours later in the Mercy Hospital. Her husband and Mrs. Elizabeth Rodgers, 50, of 2409 Hobson street, are reported to be in critical condition in the same hospital.

WOMAN ARRESTED

Police who arrested Zuckerman also arrested Mrs. Louise Peters, of McKeesport. Mrs. Peters, at liberty on $1,000 bail, and Zuckerman are being held for the coroner. The accident is said to have happened when Zuckerman passed Mrs. Peters' automobile on the boulevard at Miltenberger street. His car is said to have cut into the path of the Hayman automobile, sideswiping it and hurtling it through the fence.

Joseph Bally, 35, an employe on the Frank Dravo estate, Sewickley Heights, was killed yesterday when he leaped or fell into the path of an automobile in Oliver way, Edgeworth. He had been riding on a truck and in leaving the truck was struck by the automobile driven by T. McKee Graham, of Edgeworth. Bally died a short time after being admitted to the Valley Hospital, Sewickley.

Mrs. Virginia Gregory, 28, a Negro of 6519 Rowan avenue, is in the Pittsburgh Hospital suffering a fractured skull, received, police say, when her husband's car struck three parked automobiles in Larimer avenue last night. Russell Jackson, 13, of Deary street, sitting in one of the parked machines, was cut and bruised. Arthur Gregory, the injured woman's husband, was arrested.

HIT BY MOTORCYCLE

Mrs. Josephine Kearns, of 1615 Franklin street, suffered a fractured right leg when hit by a motorcycle at West Ohio and Merchant streets. She was removed to the Allegheny General Hospital. Police arrested Joseph Guardini, 23, of 512 Suismon street, as the driver.

When the steering rod on their automobile snapped while they were riding in the Frankstown road, a young woman and two men were injured this morning. They are Miss Charlotte Owens, 18, of Hamilton avenue; Alvin Rice, 20, of 116 Suismon street, and Charles Dougherty, 23, of 728 South avenue, Wilkinsburg. Dougherty, driver of the machine, was detained at the Columbia Hospital where the others were treated for minor injuries.

Congress Action Sought To Assure DO-X Visit

WASHINGTON, June 28.—(Universal.)—Congressional wheels are today in motion to facilitate the visit of the DO-X flying boat to this country.

A bill extending the courtesy of the government and permitting the huge craft to come in free of duty has been introduced by Representative Royal S. Johnson (Rep.), of South Dakota.

Chairman Hawley (Rep.), of Oregon, of the Ways and Means Committee, has called upon the Commerce, War, Navy, Treasury and Justice Departments for opinions.

It is held this great plane, with its 12 American-made motors and its capacity to carry 160 passengers, will contribute much toward stimulating air-mindedness in the United States. Quick responses from the government department approving the bill were expected.

A face against time to obtain passage of the Johnson resolution was under way. Faced with the likelihood that Congress will adjourn in a few days, supporters of the bill pressed for action.

Joining in the movement, the Executive Committee of the District of Columbia Department, American Legion, passed a resolution urging that Congress immediately pass the Johnson resolution.

Two Hurt as Wind Tears Los Angeles From Mast

LAKEHURST, N. J., June 28.—(AP.)—Two marines were severely shaken up and several others were badly bruised when the naval dirigible Los Angeles broke from its mooring mast while attempting to land yesterday.

A taut cable, which snapped under the strain of a sudden gust of wind, started the trouble, officers said.

The entire personnel of the station was called out to cling to the ropes and hold the ship to earth. After a five-hour battle the dirigible was secured to the mast and at 8 o'clock it was dragged into its hangar.

Yesterday the dirigible went 150 miles out to sea to avoid a severe thunder storm. It returned to the station later to try to land, but the winds drove it away.

After remaining aloft until noon today, it returned the second time. It was then the men were injured.

CHEF NAMED IN SECOND ACTION

Duke of Leinster Married May Etheridge in 1913, After Whirlwind Courtship

International News Service.

EDINBURGH, June 28.—The Duke of Leinster, premier duke and Earl of Ireland, today was granted a divorce from the former May Etheridge, one-time musical comedy star.

He had charged unfaithfulness, naming Stanley Williams, 26-year-old chef, in whose modest Brixton flat the duchess attempted suicide by inhaling gas, a few months ago, as co-respondent.

It was the second action taken by the duke against the girl who had danced her way from across the footlights of a London theater into one of the oldest and most distinguished titles in Britain. He filed suit for divorce in 1926, but the case then was dropped.

They were married in 1913, when the duke was Lord Edward Fitzgerald. He had fallen in love with her at first sight when he saw her in "Princess Caprice" at the Gayety Theater, in London, and their marriage followed a whirlwind courtship.

Their honeymoon was spent in Canada, the couple choosing a tumbledown shack in the backwoods in preference to the duke's ancestral home in Ireland.

Lord Edward served in the war, and upon his return fell heir to the dukedom through the death of his father. The duchess had returned to the stage, under her maiden name, and it was reported both had encountered financial difficulties.

For almost 10 years the duchess dropped out of sight. Society was shocked, a few months ago, to hear she had been found unconscious from gas fumes in the Brixton lodging house. Arrested on a charge of attempted suicide, the duchess was haled into court in tears. Testimony showed she and Williams, who is married, had quarreled over a radio set, and that the duchess had turned on all the jets of a kitchen stove.

Found guilty, she was released on parole.

Olean Fire Fighters Guard Blazing Oil

OLEAN, N. Y., June 27.—(AP.)—A smoky pall hung over this city while fire fighters kept guard over 17,000 barrels of burning oil which had done more than $150,000 damage since lightning fired a storage tank.

The tank, owned by the Vacuum Oil Company, contained 25,000 barrels of crude oil. Soon after it burst into flames, employes began pumping from the base in hope of averting an explosion. When 8,000 barrels of oil had been pumped out the reservoir cracked and boiled over. The fiery liquid formed a blazing lake.

Marion Davies Gracious To Aides, Actor Says

SAN FRANCISCO, June 28.—(Universal.)—Whew! Its h-mm-cool in San Francisco.

But not too cool and isn't Lawrence Gray glad!

That good looking and charming boy from San Francisco, who has made good in the metropolis of Hollywood, has come home and forgotten his overcoat. Arriving here last night, he commented:

"I left my top coat and vest in Santa Barbara. And here the warm weather has come right along with me and I don't need them. Gee, it's good to get home!"

The last time Gray was in San Francisco, nearly two years ago, he was just about ready to give up his hard won position of eminence in the film world. Hollywood had gone talkie. Whether he was going with it or away from it was a debatable question.

Then came "Marianne" and Marion Davies picked him for her leading man. He rose to greater success opposite Miss Davies in "The Florodora Girl." Now he says:

"I hope I can play opposite Miss Davies again soon. She's a most delightful person to work with. She is always pleasant and never temperamental. And she always wants to give her co-workers a good break."

Soldiers Ask Former Foes To Attend Big Picnic

Members of former Allied or Central Power armies or service groups in the World War are invited to the annual Sun-Telegraph picnic for ex-soldiers at Kennywood Park next Saturday, by special request of Charles S. Lane, Jr., representing the American Legion, and Harry S. Hall, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The request for the invitation according to Lane, was made in the hope that the picnic this year might mark the complete end of any feeling of hostility growing out of the war. Lane and Hall issued the following statement:

"Members of our organizations feel that the war is over and realize that men in opposing armies suffered as much as we. We feel, also, that our cordiality for members of the Allied forces should not be allowed to die down as the years roll by.

"We never had the chance to become acquainted with our 'enemies' nor to talk over the war with them very much. Now that the memory of firing guns and terrible suffering on both sides has had a chance to cool, now that we can all see the war in the intelligent light of a horrible disaster to all concerned in it, we want to meet and know members of other armies from other countries who chance to be in or near Pittsburgh at the time of the picnic."

The annual Sun-Telegraph picnic, therefore, is open to any person who served with any army in the World War and to all persons who have taken part in any other American conflict.

Free tickets to park amusements are to be given to any one who can identify himself as among those persons. Men and women both are asked to wear their uniforms wherever possible. This is not necessary, however, and discharge papers, identification disks, draft slips and other suitable records will be accepted as evidence of service. Tickets likewise will be extended to companions of ex-service members.

In the evening, one of the principal events will take place when Civil War veterans, whether from the North and the South, and disabled veterans being treated in government hospitals meet at the annual Sun-Telegraph dinner in the Kennywood Park dining rooms.

Athletic events are being arranged.

There was only one dissenting vote on the resolutions, which were offered by R. O. Jones, layman. Objection to the "whitewashing" of charges against the bishop at the general conference in Dallas was included in the resolutions.

Laymen attending the conference said it was the sentiment of the gathering that other Methodist churches should follow suit and ask the bishop's resignation, in view of the stock market gambling charge against him and by preponderance of requests force him out of the church.

HALE STREET PAVING URGED

The repaving of Hale street is badly needed, members of Council and engineers of the Department of Public Works insisted yesterday.

They vigorously denied that the repaving, at a contract price of $14,802, was ordered unnecessarily.

President of Council John S. Herron, in an open committee meeting, said that the foundation of Hale street is practically gone and that it has become impossible to patch or repair it economically or satisfactorily. The street was paved in 1907, he said.

He was substantiated by James D. Strain, of the asphalt division.

Chief Engineer Charles M. Reppert said that surfacing over a bad foundation is poor economy and that the department was trying to stop the practice as much as possible.

Herron and the others pointed out that they want Hale street repaved to meet heavier traffic demands during and following the extensive Bennett street improvement, for which a contract was awarded this week.

"We always recommend RCA Radiotrons" says

DR. FULTON CUTTING
Chairman of the Board
COLONIAL RADIO CORPORATION

"COLONIAL engineers are enthusiastic about RCA Radiotrons and test all Colonial sets with them. It has been repeatedly proven that inferior tubes are a serious handicap to complete radio satisfaction, for if the tubes do not function properly, nothing functions properly. RCA Radiotrons are recognized as the standard of the industry and are built with scientific precision. So we always recommend RCA Radiotrons to owners of Colonial sets."

RADIO ENGINEERS ADVISE: Replace all the vacuum tubes in your radio set with RCA Radiotrons at least once a year. This is the only sure way to maintain good performance and maximum disagreeable noises and other troubles caused by inferior tubes. RCA Radiotrons will give you the maximum in selectivity, sensitivity and tone quality.

Look for the red and black carton and the famous RCA trade-mark

'Y' CAMPS DROP 'MONKEY DRILL'

The "monkey drill," long a part of the routine of every boys' camp, has been eliminated at the Pittsburgh Y. M. C. A. boys' camp this summer, Winthrop G. Martin boys' work secretary, said today.

This colorful name was the label given to early morning setting-up exercises. The value of these exercises, designed to "wake a boy up and get him started for the day," has been debated for some time by medical men, Martin said.

The "Y" camps are going to have more rest periods this summer and will guard against too strenuous programs, Martin said. Both camps, Porter and Kon-O-Kwee, open tomorrow.

SILK SUIT OFFERS SHEER COMFORT FOR TORRID DAYS

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, JUNE 28.—For sheer comfort the silk suit eases into first position as an ideal late Spring and early Summer outfit. It has been many seasons, if ever at all, that the suit of thin silk has been so well or cleverly handled. Deft tailoring, strict attention to infinite details, clever manipulation of the fabric all combine to create a costume replete with chic and cool comfort. The principal criticism formerly leveled against the suit of silk was that it soon acquired a disheveled look and that the skirt hung unevenly and poorly. But now all of these unpleasant drawbacks have been faced and vanquished and you may expect a reasonable amount of wear from your suit and the assurance that it will be good looking as well as useful, an ideal combination always.

EVENING FROCKS continue to offer a fertile field for the designer able to combine the picturesque with the high-lights of the mode. Beautifully cut and draped, often made of semi-sheer materials, such frocks should do yeoman duty throughout the season without ever being conspicuous for their period of service. Very little or no attempt is made to embellish or trim these frocks and they are thus able to acquire and preserve an air of expensive simplicity, a goal toward which every woman who comprehends the subtleties of style, constantly strives.

THE SIMPLE, but very smart dress for Summer evenings, sketched for this page is from Miranda who makes it of delicate pastel blue crepe romain. The soft folds at the waistline are drawn into two looped ends knotting in front. The very wide and circularly cut godets which form the flaring skirt flounces are spaced at regular intervals marked by descending points at the front and sides of the yoke. There is a deep V-shaped decolletage in back. A clever color contrast is achieved by the use of large turquoise bead jewelry.

IN CHANEL'S Summer collection is shown the three-piece ensemble which is of green tussor with a printed green and white diamond motif. The frock consists of a sleeveless jumper and a skirt pleated at one side. The jacket is hip length and has extremely wide revers, but no collar. All the edges are cut in an uneven toothed line stitched over and over to prevent fraying.

The fourth of a series of conferences on mine drainage was held at the Faculty Club yesterday by the Bituminous Coal Mine Drainage Board of Pennsylvania. The board met to study means of purifying streams that carry off acid refuse of coal mines. Co-operation with representatives of public water works to continue sealing mines that give off drainages injurious to public water supplies, was pledged by the board.

Reports of committees revealed that investigations into equipment and machinery of the bituminous coal concerns in the state had shown a marked development toward protection of pure streams and toward cleansing those which were impure. SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

Soldiers who were in the Eightieth Division will tell you that the late Congressman Porter was their good friend that in Washington he spent much of his time arranging their pensions and obtaining justified favors. The congressman had two legislative hobbies, a love for naval officers and foreign embassies. He used to tell that he was urged to take up these subjects by two women, Alice Mellon Bruce, daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury and Mr. Porter's mother.

Mrs. Bruce told Miss Mellon one day on a liner returning from Europe and bemoaned the fact that our ambassadors had to live in embassies which were not in keeping with their positions. The Secretary's daughter asked that these embassies be built. Procedure for 100 years. Mr. Porter kept these things in mind when later he was instrumental in having Congress build bigger and better embassies.

Mr. Porter never lost an opportunity to emphasize that narcotic fiends should be cured, not merely imprisoned. He himself as a clerk in a drug store in his younger days had had the opportunity to observe such persons and later his mother was credited with encouraging him to work for the unfortunates.

We have a non-sneaking suspicion that the local force of prohibition agents will go all to sartorial pieces now that Commander Pennington has been transferred. For the Commander, fresh from the Navy, was the strictest disciplinarian ever sent to Pittsburgh by your Uncle Sam.

Pennington was the supreme critic in the matter of dress and, without investigating the national situation, we'll bet the prettiest penny in town that Pittsburgh's agents were better dressed than any others.

The Commander's pet abomination was colored shirts. The agent who showed up to do some fancy raiding dressed in a pink shirt stood an excellent chance of being sent home for a change.

We, too, were opposed to the tariff bill until we read the revised rates. Under the old bill there was a 25 per cent tariff on truffles. By the new bill truffles are admitted to this good old country free of charge.

Burns and Kissen, that comedy team at the Stanley not so long ago, was fined $75 by the management for not making the customers laugh at one show. . . . Art Rooney, the best all-around semi-pro athlete in the Rooney family, drinks a dozen and a half glasses of water every day and wouldn't touch the stronger stuff if two snakes bit him. . . . The hordes of learning drivers who do their learning on Beechwood boulevard don't realize that the 4000 block is the slipperiest stretch in town. . . . William Gillette, who retired from the stage in Pittsburgh and was given a fond farewell, is planning to retire from his retirement. . . .

Oscar Straus Puts Music In New Picture for Ramon Novarro

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, June 28.

TALKIE MUSICALS have fallen somewhat into disrepute, but they are in no wise to be abandoned. Ramon Novarro starts almost immediately upon "Daybreak" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

This is a musical show which will have a score by Oscar Strauss, famous Viennese composer. The story is being adapted from a novel by Arthur Schnitzler. In view of the fact that the composer of "The Chocolate Soldier" has been assigned to it, "Daybreak" may safely be termed an important production.

Novarro has just returned to Hollywood from a month's vocal instruction with his teacher, Louis Graveure, in Lansing, Mich.

Ramon Novarro.

Top Sergeant: "Hey, you, stick your hand over your mush when you yawn."

Rookie: "What—and get bit?"

POLLY MORAN ILL

Polly Moran is leaving Hollywood this week for Mount Clemens, Mich., where she will enter a hospital for an operation.

DEADLOCK CONTINUES

The deadlock between Janet Gaynor and the Fox Company remains unchanged. Understand that Janet hasn't been on the lot since February.

The feeling out here is that Janet and Winfield Sheehan are trying to outwait each other. She is holding out for him to send for her, and he simply isn't bothering.

Janet Gaynor.

MARY TO RESUME

From a friend of Kenneth McKenna this department learns that the probable starting date of Mary Pickford's picture is August 1. McKenna has been notified to report for work on that day. In the meantime he has had another taste of waiting for a story to be rewritten. "The General" will be postponed until Paramount can make certain alterations in the script. Though Walter Huston has the leading role in this film, McKenna is an important member of the cast.

CANDIDATE QUIZ BACKED BY BAR

BEDFORD SPRINGS, Pa., June 28.—(AP.)—The Pennsylvania Bar Association, on the closing day of its convention, approved by a close vote appointment of a committee to consider whether some plan can be devised whereby the association can gather and disseminate information about candidates for the appellate courts.

Bernard J. Meyers, Lancaster, retiring as president with the unanimous election as his successor of John B. Brooks, of Erie, opposed the proposal, declaring it would be "a great mistake."

Vice presidents and executive committee members for the eight zones of the state were elected. In the sixth zone, which includes Allegheny County, those elected were Forest O. Mourehead, Beaver County, vice president; M. W. Acheson, Allegheny, executive committee. Walter C. Montgomery, Greene County, was elected executive committeeman to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Moorehead.

THERE IS NO SCANDAL AND NOT MUCH ELSE FOR PENN HEROINE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Lady of Scandal" came into the Penn yesterday. But she forgot to bring the scandal along. So all you see and hear is a rather tame and stilted excursion in the realm of movie drama.

The production is one of those English drawing-room affairs based on the stage play. "The High Road." Its story is all about an actress who becomes engaged to the son of an English title, falls in love with his cousin and ends up by taking neither of them. Son of Title goes off to India. Cousin goes to another man's wife (or rather his widow by now) and Actress goes back to the stage.

There are numerous other characters stuck into all this—a regular house party of uncles, aunts and cousins. But the one you'd like to see most doesn't appear. We mean the other man's wife. She, poor soul, is kept out of sight and sound in Paris.

AND SO NOBLE!

Ruth Chatterton portrays the title role. She weeps while a radio broadcasts "Happy Days Are Here Again." Which is such obvious contrast. She stares with tear-dimmed eyes through rain-stained windows. Which is so stagey. And she makes a gesture of sacrifice in closing sequences. Which is too noble to be real. But these things are no reflection on that acting talent that is hers. Rather, she is the victim of an insufficient part.

Basil Rathbone and Ralph Forbes have the leading male roles.

On the stage is "Japanites." Nelly Kelly is prominent. Nell is all legs and arms and a blue dress. She's a sort of 1930 edition of Charlotte Greenwood.

OH, FOR A SOMERSAULT!

Wesley Eddy continues to boss the ceremonies. In addition, he does a singing impersonation of Frenchman Maurice Chevalier that is pretty clever. Other entertainers include Three Rhythm Dancers, Negro lads keen at the hoofing, and the Sensational Kikutas. The "sensational" is by their own christening.

In spite of good talent, there is a fatiguing sameness to some of these stage revues. Dancing girls alternate in the spotlight with specialty entertainers. The master of ceremonies turns his back, wiggles about and the band plays. If only the pianist would do a somersault. Or the M. C. stand still for an entire performance. That at least would be something different.

David Prestiski has his overture-orchestra making gypsy music. And Organist Wild takes to glorifying the Lindbergh baby. But when yesterday he brought in the stork and the future, we put on our hat and walked out.

Hurt in Trolley, Woman Asks $75,000

Pauline Costantini and her husband, Morris Costantini, have brought suit against the Pittsburgh Railways Company for $75,000 damages, for injuries to Mrs. Costantini sustained in a collision between two street cars. The accident happened July 8, 1928, at Twenty-fourth street and Liberty avenue, at which time it is alleged Mrs. Costantini was hurt internally. Their counsel is James I. Marsh.

ALDINE THRILLER HAS GANGLAND THEME, SOBS, LAUGHS

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

Fox Pictures, with brain-throbs magnificent, have filmed and present in the Aldine "Born Reckless," a movie with all the thrills of gangland war, mother-love and what-not. Nor are the sobs and laughs left out.

Thrillers we have had since the first rapid-fire penny peep-show with its hand organ effect. But Mr. Fox has outdone many of them in "Born Reckless"—an irrelevant title.

And, as the underworld might tell it.

IN GANGSTER LINGO

It's all about a guy caught with the goods on the East Side. So when the big scrap between the Frogs and the Heinies breaks out, a judge sends Louis Beretti (that's Edmund Lowe's monniker in the movie only; see?) over the pond instead of to the Big House.

And the dumb bozo comes back and goes straight; see? He opens up a bootleg joint, what's on the level. Louis is gone over a rich dame who's married a guy from her own crowd. This dame's the sister of a guy what was Louis' buddy in the big scrap. So this heel, Louis, promises to stand by her.

Then his old mob, which his pals the head of, grabs the rich moll's kid. Louis goes to bring the bambino back and gets plugged in the arm. When he gets back to his joint, him and his pal play around with the gats awhile and they both kick off, see? But the dame's happy, so everything's jake.

"CHARMING" WAR

In that the show makes the war seem a charming place to spend your vacation, it's a fair antidote for some of the more realistic war pictures with which we have been entertained of late.

Best shot: The caissons go rolling along.

Best sound: Beretti wades through the salt marsh in the fog. Hear those bell buoys and fog horns.

Catherine Dale Owen is the women for whom the hero sacrifices himself so thoroughly.

There's also a travel picture and some slap-stick comedy in a Charley Chase reel, entitled "Fast Work."

Sees Worms!

Colin Clive, in a powerful dramatic portrayal of Capt. Stanhope in "Journey's End," war film opening today in the Harris, looks right through dugout walls and sees the worms crawling.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Handicap

I'd like to act as tho' I didn't care,
I'd like to show the world a smiling face;
But acting is an art—I'm well aware,
And one that I'm unfitted to embrace.

I've tried to find the path to happiness,
The path I once walked laughing-eyed with you;
But when you took your heart away, I guess
The trail to Rainbow's-End went with it, too.

It's funny, there are many girls around,
You'd think that I could easily forget;
I've tried my best—yet not a one I've found
Can turn my thoughts or banish my regret.

Such faithfulness in lads is most unique—
It's nice, my dear, that you are not so weak!

—AV3X.

As a Matter o' Fact

Mr. Paul Sweinhart, who edits Zit's Weekly, the theatrical oracle, scoops the field with:

"Walter Winchell isn't going to play at the Palace. Remembering the days he worked for coffee and cakes, he looked the bookers in the eye and asked for $4,000 per week, which was too much for the RKO bankroll to digest."

Well, this is very flattering and nice of Mr. Sweinhart, but his informant failed to add the real reason, which is that we would rather be shot at dawn than hear a Palace spectator say:

"Things I Never Knew Till Now—that the Cherry Sisters had a brother!"

Is My Face Red?

First-nighters who went to the shore to witness the premiere of Earl Carroll's new revusical report that one of the more amusing sketches goes like this: Two girls are playing with mud.

"What picture are you making?" asked the first. "That's a picture of Mark Hellinger," is the reply.

"Why don't you make one of Walter Winchell?"

"Ain't got enough dirt!"

Bravo!

Ned Brown relates this most interesting suggestion by Al Singer, the fighter, on how to erase the stench from foul blows. Singer hopes that the New York State Boxing Commission will agree that when he meets Mandell both wear protective apparatus that has been demonstrated to prevent injury from foul punches—and that it be incorporated in the articles of agreement between the fighters that neither shall win or lose on a foul.

In the event of a foul the only penalty enforced to be the loss of the round by the perpetrator.

A lusty cheer for Mr. Singer, and a lustier one if his suggestion becomes a law.

Revised Version

As well-done as a New York day in June.

A Form of Criticism

William McCaffery, vaudeville scout, was swapping lip with a confrere in front of the Palace, when a well-known ham ankled along.

"That's Joe Doakes," said the confrere, "is he clever?"

"Well," snapped Mac, "if you don't think so, ask him."

Origin

The attractive letterhead of the Funk and Wagnalls Company features a slogan in red ink, viz: "Look Up a Word a Day." So perhaps the origin of "vaudeville" should be listed among other things you never knew till now.

"Vaudeville" really means "The Valley of Vire." Vire is a small town in Normandy, France. In the 15th century there lived in the valley a poet christened Olivier Basselin, who invented a type of satirical song to which he gave the name of his native district.

As time passed the expression took on further meanings, with the result that at the present time it is used in a general way in the United States to designate almost any form of entertainment consisting of successive acts or separate performances.

As If We Didn't Know

"It isn't the heat," bellows Robert Garland, "it's the Humanity!!!"

The Morning Mail

"Dear W. W." affectionately writes Donald Barr Chidsey, one of the better typewriter jugglers, "Seems to be a lot in the col'm these days about when a man's drunk and when he isn't. As a matter of fact this question was decided some time ago by Thomas L. Peacock (1785-1866), if you must know. In even an abridged edition of his 'the Misfortunes of Elphin,' you will find, among other amusing things, this definition:

"Not drunk is he, who from the floor
"Can rise alone, and still drink more;
"But drunk is he, who prostrate lies,
"Without the power to drink or rise."

Thanks for the Ad

According to the current number of Judge, The Pathfinder, one of the more amusing jokebooks of Washington, D. C., is credited with:

"The reason floorwalkers wear flowers in their buttonholes is that they won't stay in their hair!"

Some of us on Broadway can remember all the way back when it was told about chorus boys.

THE MORNING BRINGS HAPPY ENDING IN ENRIGHT

By KATHERINE GODARD

"Bride of the Regiment," one of the usual pictures of the musical comedy type, opened a week's run in the Enright yesterday.

The story is set in Italy. The cast includes Walter Pidgeon, Vivienne Segal, Ford Sterling, Louise Fazenda, Myrna Loy, and Lupino Lane.

The plot concerns a lovely countess whose hospitality is demanded by an Austrian colonel for himself and his regiment. The count, her husband, is held captive by the Austrians and the price asked for his freedom is the wife.

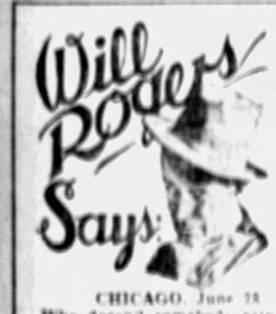
The colonel and his regiment take possesson of the castle, which, strangely enough, seems to have all the luxurious arrangement one would expect to find in a modern American mansion. They help themselves to the contents of the wine-cellar, produce an orchestra, and spend the night in dancing and singing. Eventually the morning arrives and with it the tragedy of the count's death is avoided and the end of the story is a happy one.

Other features on the bill include Graham McNamee in a news reel, a Vitaphone variety, a Lloyd Hamilton comedy, and Cyril Guthoerl at the organ.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question—Do you favor the pending legislation in Congress that would give medical aid to all World War veterans or would you rather see the government instead spend more money on those incapacitated in service?



CHICAGO, June 28.

Why doesn't somebody print the truth about our present economic situation? We spent six years of wild buying on credit (everything under the sun, whether we needed it or not), and now are having to pay for 'em under Mr. Hoover, and we are howling like a pet coon.

Yours, WILL.

P. S.: This would be a great world to dance in if we didn't have to pay the fiddler.

MRS. O. C. MYERS, saleswoman, Wilkinsburg—All veterans should be taken care of. Weren't they all helping the country cause and didn't they all do their share in all lines of work?

Mrs. Myers.

TED STEPHENS, florist, Wilkinsburg—They ought to follow the precedent set in other wars. Our task wasn't any greater and former war veterans got all that was coming in the way of medical attention and help. The wounded man should receive first consideration.

Ted Stephens.

B. BASS, jeweler, Pittsburgh—The veterans should all be helped by the government—the ones that need help that is. A lot of them don't need it at all but ask for it just the same.

B. Bass.

H. F. ALLEN, florist, Wilkinsburg—Every veteran of the World War is entitled to all he gets from the government. They all gave all they had and they all deserve a lot in payment.

H. F. Allen.

LEONARD PRICE, shop owner, East Liberty—I think aid should be given to all World War veterans whether they were seriously wounded or not injured at all. Didn't they all take part in the war?

Leonard Price.

MISS GERTRUDE IDDINGS, bookkeeper, Pitcairn—All the men who took part in the war should be taken care of whether they were badly hurt or not. It's only fair to think of them as a group and not as small divisions of men.

Miss Iddings.

STEEL TONNAGE MAKES FAIR SHOWING

Industry Suffering From Increased Capacity and Competition in Prices

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel makes the same showing as is made by business in general and by various individual lines, that the quantitative statistics present a better appearance than would be expected from general appraisals of the state of trade. There are the reports from Washington for months past showing by actual figures much building and manufacturing activity, yet everyone knows there is much labor unemployment. The automobile trade is considered very poor, yet production has been under that of only a few years.

DOUBLE COMPARISON

The steel trade has been considered dull all this year with the exception of a spell of a few weeks and it is considered poorer of late than early in the year, but the production statistics fall quite short of fully supporting such appraisals. A double comparison may be made of the half year compared with the first half of other years, and of the second quarter as compared with the first quarter. Total production of steel ingots in the first quarter was 12,300,000 tons and is about 11,600,000 tons in the quarter now ending, making 23,900,00 tons for the half year.

SET BACK MEASURED

As large a first half production was not reached until 1926 and that year and the following had an insignificant excess, while 1928 showed 5 per cent and 1929 23 per cent excess over the first half of this year. Thus steel has not been set back much in point of time.

Comparing the first and second quarters of this year, the rate of production decreased about 7 per cent. In 1925 a good year on the whole since it made a new record, there was 16 per cent decrease from first to second quarter, and the next two years had 5 or 6 per cent decrease, but one made a new record and the other was off by having a very poor second half, which just goes to show that steel has ways of its own and cannot be predicted with confidence.

STATE OF MIND

It is clear at any rate that steel has not been doing so badly in point of tonnage as might be supposed. It is suffering from increased capacity and from some particularly aggressive if not erratic price competition in several lines, while in other lines in which prices are fairly steady they are quite low.

The divergence between the quantitative statistics and the common appraisals may perhaps be explained by reference to sentiment or states of mind. Early in the year there was a certain amount of activity which represented a sharp recovery from the dullness of late in the old year and expectations were quite rosy of further improvement. Then there was disappointment. To use words which are sometimes overworked, there was too much optimism early in the year and there has been too much pessimism lately, these words denoting states of mind, not calm and dispassionate appraisals of physical conditions.

Rail Contractor Claims Record For Work

A record for work accomplished during the month of May is claimed by Samuel G. Polino, general contractor, who has the contract for the P. & W. Va. Railroad extension near Scottdale.

Mr. Polino said that in his 25 years' experience he has not known of any occasion when the record made by his men has been reached.

Using a gasoline shovel, 56,000 cubic yards of dirt and rock were removed during May. The crew is composed of Miles Barham, Paul Britton, V. R. Stickley and Bernard Brown.

Store Employment Changes With Seasons

WASHINGTON, June 28—Employment in retail stores throughout the United States last spring, when the census was taken, was slightly in excess of April, 1929, Department of Commerce reported in connection with its census of distribution. This phase of the decennial enumeration is separate from the census unemployment results of which are being given out locally.

Figures are for 41,446 independent stores and 2,520 units of chains, and are of retail stores of all kinds. They showed that 388,424 persons were employed when the census was taken, against 387,034 in April, 1929.

The schedule shows that these same establishments employed 384,236 in July, 1929; 405,572 in October, and 465,265 in December, last year, indicating what is probably the normal seasonal fluctuation throughout the calendar year.

UPWARD TREND IN BUSINESS

NEW YORK, June 28—Business in the United States will emerge from depression at the end of July. It then will swing upward and stealing a march on the slow-witted and self-centered stock market, will become normal in October, says the Business Week. The business tide reached its ebb during the past two weeks and is beginning to turn, very slowly and tentatively, in face of a strong current of peevish, superficial and premature pessimism.

There will be no noticeable change in the next few weeks. Continued liquidation in certain lines will overlap and obscure increasing resistance, stabilization and upturn in others. Progress will be slow, irregular, spasmodic, with sporadic relapses, successively less frequent and sharp, till the end of July. Then, in the same weeks when a year ago the downturn began, a decisive recovery will set in, general and definite enough to be evident to the blue-funk brigades of business who have been enjoying their May-parties and June-walks in the cemeteries. The rise of the business curve thereafter will be rapid. By October it will be back to normal.

There was a sharp circumstantial rise in the business index from the low point of 88.8 per cent last week to 93.6 per cent this week, a figure comparing with 110.7 per cent in the corresponding week last year. Other statistical straws suggest strongly that the confused economic currents are setting more uniformly in the direction of recovery. The adjournment of Congress will help clear the channel.

Venezuelan Oil Production Curbed

NEW YORK, June 28.—Coincident with the reduction in crude oil output in the country, there has been in recent months sizable curtailment in the Venezuelan fields. Although in the first five months this year production in Venezuela averaged 370,735 barrels a day, or slightly in excess of the daily average of 370,402 barrels in the corresponding period last year, average output declined to 357,468 barrels daily in April and 352,207 daily in May.

In line with curtailment of production, there has been a reduction in the number of wells drilling and the working forces in the field. At the beginning of June this year 32 wells were being drilled in various Venezulean producing fields, whereas a year previous there were 50 drilling and on June 1, 1928, a total of 40. Potential output of the fields proven up is substantially in excess of the volume actually being produced at present.

Work Started at Ambridge by A. M. Byers

The A. M. Byers Company rolled the first billets made by its new process at the plant near Ambridge this week. Part of the rolling mill equipment is still unfinished but the main portion of the facilities for making wrought iron are in working order. Production has been started with operations of one turn a day. This will be increased after the first crew has been satisfactorily trained.

STRIKE MADE BY HOGE

The Hoge Development Company, owned by Pittsburgh men and Arthur Hoge of Nevada City, Cal., and operating in the Grass valley district, Cal., has opened up on the 300-foot level of its workings, a four-foot vein that reflects mill run assay values of over $60 per ton and another vein found near the original vein carries even higher values. Although the strike is in one of the oldest gold bearing sections of the United States, it has created great excitement in Nevada City where the Newmont interests recently purchased the Empire and the North Star mines, neighbors of the Hoge Company, and which have been producing gold for past 50 years. The Hoge Company owns practically all surrounding territory within two miles of the strike. The Hoge stock is rather closely held.

Banker Inspects Gas Properties

Carlos Reutter, vice-president of Purlaud and Company, New York bankers, who financed the merger which resulted in the formation of the Duquesne Gas Corporation, was in Pittsburgh yesterday inspecting the Duquesne properties south and east of here. Mr. Reutter said he was impressed with conditions and the progress being made by Duquesne.

The company is making rapid progress he added. In addition to the original purchase, which included 153 producing wells, Duquesne is adding additional ones constantly and locations and drillings are being added every week.

GLASS TRADE UNUSUALLY QUIET

Stabilization Movement To Influence Future Course of Markets

The demand for window, plate and other flat glass products, reflecting sub-normal activity in principal consuming industries, continues along unusually quiet seasonal lines, according to American Glass Review.

During the past week, however, developments of major significance in their almost certain effect on the future of the market were not lacking. Outstanding among these was the continuation of the movement for stabilization of both production and distribution in this branch of the industry, with the week's happenings indicating progress in that direction.

Plate glass continues in slow movement out of manufacturers' warehouses, with the demand for this product showing virtually no improvement during the week. Consumption by the automobile industry, the mirror manufacturers, and other large users is well below the seasonal average. Until increased activity is shown in these industries. No very pronounced improvement in the demand for plate glass is to be expected. Production of plate glass is at a low seasonal level and it is understood to be now running at les than 60 per cent of capacity.

Comparatively little change was to be noted this week in the window glass situation. Nearly all business being placed with the manufacturers is for early trade requirements. Output at the window glass facories, while slightly larger than a month ago, is estimated at only about a third of the industry's capacity.

The dullness of the market for both plate and window glass is likewise considerably in evidence in the rough rolled and wire glass field, and production of these products is on a curtailed basis.

During the week ended June 21 imports of window glass into this country registered a substantial gain over the preceding week's volume, according to the latest unofficial compilations. Incoming shipments of plate glass, on the other hand, receded in quantity. In window glass, imports for the week totaled 3,009 boxes and 2,396 pounds, as against 1,155 boxes received the week of June 14. Imports of plate glass for the comparative periods were 75 cases and 106 cases, respectively.

RESEARCH AIDS CHROMIUM PLATING

Development of Industry Depends Upon Thorough Knowledge of Process

It is only during the past few years that chromium has been electroplated commercially. Since 1925 enormous strides have been made in the chromium plating industry. The first use of chromium plate was for the bright parts of automobiles, plumbing fixtures and similar applications which are generally familiar.

The research work on lustrous chromium plating was carried on over a period of several years it was finally adopted for common use. Although there are excellent possibilities for further research in lustrous plating, the chromium plating process has been refined to such an extent that lustrous plating is now performed with but little difficulty.

AIDES INDUSTRY

Research work that is necessary for the proper development of hard chromium plating has only begun. Hard chromium plating, in thicknesses that are from 200 to 1,000 times as thick as the chromium deposit on a radiator shell, finds its application in the prevention of wear or corrosion for various tools, rolls, molds, and working parts that are used in industry. Chromium is extremely hard and will resist abrasion to a high degree. Because of these qualities it is now finding common use in many applications where high resistance to wear or abrasion, or both, is necessary.

Such parts as steel mill rolls, glass rolls and molds, paper machine rolls, bakelite molds, brick and tile dies, various tools and gauges, Diesel engine parts, locomotive motion pins, and many other parts are being plated by the United States Chromium Corporation, Pitt and Wallace streets, Wilkinsburg. This company is the only organization of its kind that devotes all of its efforts to hard chromium plating.

DEVELOPS PROCESS

During the past three years it has developed a process for chromium, which enables it to secure a chromium deposit that has 40 times the resistance to brasion of an ordinary chromium plate. At the same time, although the chromium deposit is harder than file hard steel, it is sufficiently ductile to permit it to be bent and hammered without cracking or or breaking.

This has been accomplished only by extensive research. Many thousands of samples have been plated and tested. At the present time, the scope of the research department is being extended to cover all of the factors affecting chromium deposits. The success of hard chromium plating depends solely upon the research work that has been completed, or is still in the laboratory.

LIBERTY PLANS OUTING

The Liberty Dairy Picnic will be held at Kennywood Park Monday, July 21. The swimming pool will be open all day, however, there will be no swimming races. At 2 o'clock there will be a baby show conducted along the same lines as the one that was held last year. Two short ball games will be played, teams from each plant participating.

Of unusual interest are the track and field events that will take place. There will be a tug-of-war, eight men to a team, one team from each plant. Also a special tug-of-war between teams of ice cream route salesman and milk route salesmen. In the evening prize waltz and prize fox trot will be held in the dance pavilion.

Special caps will be put on the milk bottles, as they were last year. These are being placed on quarts of milk and will be on the bottles two days each week until the picnic day. These caps will be redeemed at the plants. One person in each plant has been appointed to handle the caps and give out the tickets. Streamers about the picnic will be on the Liberty Dairy Products Company's wagons during the month of July.

Committees are as follows: Peter P. Carney, general chairman; C. H. Christopher, D. R. Gronfeld, New Kensington; C. E. Ritchie, Paul Oberfield, J. A. McInnish, Ann Stanley, Oakmont; G. R. Schnars, Kittanning; T. E. Carson, A. Richards, H. E. Cameron, J. P. Laux, Walter Schnee, Ralph Williams, Allegheny; B. H. Rodeniser, W. Belchner, H. Weizenhofer, M. Auen, Tobias Newman, S. H. Gulf Profit Continues At High Level

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

EARNINGS OF GULF OIL Corporation for the present year are expected to continue at about the same rate as in 1929. Net profits of $44,524,796 or $9.83 a share on 4,525,221 shares of capital stock last year established a high record. This compared with $36,347,608 or $8.06 a share in 1928 and with $13,717,217 or $3.08 a share in 1927.

Of course it is still too early in the year to make any very definite prediction on net profits. Up to the present time, however, the volume of sales and the condition of the oil market have indicated that profits have been practically parallel with the results of last year.

The industrial depression appears to have had only a moderate effect on the oil business. The consumption of gasoline has continued to show its normal rate of annual increase. The effect of lowered industrial activity is confined to refinery products which are marketed directly to industrial users. Gasoline used in the United States in the first four months of 1930 was 12 per cent greater than in the corresponding months of last year and established a record for this period.

Continues Expansion

THE POLICY OF EXPANDING operations each year regardless of conditions in this industry is being continued at an even more rapid pace than in the past. This may be expected to result in further growth in earnings in future years.

In the six years ended with 1929 Gulf doubled its investment in physical properties. At the close of 1923 properties were carried at $255,820,807 before reserves for depreciation and depletion. By the close of 1929 this account had reached $526,395,709. Against this, reserves for depreciation and depletion amounted to $255,876,789. In 1929 $79,641,000 was spent for additional plant and equipment facilities.

To Spend More This Year

EXPENDITURE IN 1930 will be at least as great as last year and may reach a large figure. In addition to minor improvements at various properties, Gulf is starting one of the greatest developments in its history. The pipe line from Tulsa to Pittsburgh with refineries in Toledo, Cincinnati and this city marks the entrance of Gulf into refinery operation at interior points. In the past its plants have been located close to sea ports.

Besides the construction of a large refinery on Neville Island here additions will be made to the refineries at Cincinnati and Toledo which have been purchased from the Paragon Refining Company. Union Gulf Corporation, the subsidiary which has undertaken the new pipe line and refinery development, has been financed by the sale of $60,000,000 in 5 per cent bonds due in 1950.

No Dividend Change Expected

WHILE GULF OIL HAS been paying only $1.50 a share annually in dividends on its stock and earned this 6½ times last year, no change in the rate is expected until the distant future.

The continuation of the expansion policy has resulted in the constant reinvestment of earnings. In spite of its small dividend payments, Gulf has not been accumulating any great amount of cash in recent years. The major shares of earnings has been put back into properties.

Gulf charges all its drilling costs to current operations so that the development of an enormous potential production of oil has not been fully reflected in the physical property account. Last year, in spite of stringent pro-ration measures, Gulf produced 78,244,852 barrels of crude oil, a gain of 24.4 per cent over 1928.

DISCUSSES NEW TRUNK LINE

NEW YORK, June 28.—W. H. Williams, chairman of the board of the Wabash Railway Company said that his railroad is going ahead with its plans to form a fifth trunk line in Eastern territory.

Mr. Williams said there were no conflicting purposes between the Toplin and Wabash interests in connection with the formation of the system. He said:

"The Wabash Railway is going ahead with its plans to form a system to comprise principally the Wabash, Ann Arbor, Lehigh Valley, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Pittsburgh and West Virginia and Western Maryland Railroads in a manner deemed the simplest way to bring about the desired end."

Recently the Wabash withdrew from the Interstate Commerce Commission its application for authority to acquire a majority stock control of the Wheeling and Lake Erie in view of the previous withdrawl of a similar petition by the Nickel Plate. Mr. Williams explained that the move was made because the road concluded the most effective course to pursue to obtain the majority Wheeling stock interest, now trusteed, was to intervene in the proceedings growing out of the commission's order directing the Nickel Plate to divest itself of Wheeling holdings. The Wabash then moved to prevent the Nickel Plate from disposing of its Wheeling stock to anyone not interested in forming a fifth trunk line as outlined by the commission.

Bond Offerings Lower for Week

NEW YORK, June 28.—New bond offerings for the week totaled $90,461,500, compared with $133,041,500 last week and $85,046,000 in the like week last year.

GENERAL TRADE GAINS IN WEEK

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Business for the week ended June 21, as measured by the volume of checks presented for payment, was more than 17 per cent greater than the week ended June 14 and 5 per cent lower than the week ended June 22, 1929. Wholesale prices declined slightly from last week and were 12 per cept lower than the same week last year. The composite iron and steel price remained unchanged from the preceding period, but showed a decline when compared with a year ago.

Bank loans and discounts registered an increase of 1 per cent over the week ended June 14 and 3 per cent over the same period in 1929. Prices for stocks showed declines from both comparative periods. As compared with the corresponding period in 1928, increases occurred in the receipts of cotton, bank loans and discounts and the prices for representative stocks.

PROMOTION FOR CREDIT MAN

H. M. Oliver, formerly the manager of the adjustment and service bureau of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania, succeeds L. I. MacQueen as executive manager of the association July 1.

Oliver has been identified with bankruptcy and adjustment work in Western Pennsylvania for the past seven years and is peculiarly well equipped to carry on the activities sponsored by the local office of the National Association of Credit Men. The change in executives was announced by L. C. Lyon, president of the association and credit manager of the Gulf Refining Company. L. I. MacQueen will head the Pittsburgh Builders Supply Club, an organization composed of the leading supply houses in the city.

The vacancy created by Oliver's change will be filled by R. H. Coleman, former manager of the Johnstown branch office. The new manager of the Johnstown District is S. I. Lasner, former extension secretary of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania.

RETAIL TRADE ACTIVITY GAINS

Automobile Accessories Reflect Good Demand; Collections Are Slow

Retail trade has been fairly active, seasonable merchandise now being stimulated by the warm weather, but jobbers of wearing apparel, shoes, millinery, etc., report buying still largely for immediate delivery and comparatively light, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

FAIR AUTO SALES

Sales of new automobiles are only fair, but there has been a rather great demand for automobile accessories and equipment. Jewelry trade continues lower than for several years past with both retailers and jobbers demand appearing to be principally for low priced novelties. Construction work still continues below normal, with residential construction comparatively light and the demand for lumber and other building materials continues slow with the exception of cement which is moving in quite large volume. Groceries and provisions are not very active and prices continue low.

Demand for electrical equipment is less active, lighting fixtures in particular moving slowly. Plumbing and heating supplies show no improvement in demand and the volume of sales is materially lower than a year ago. The price paid for Pennsylvania crude, $2.25 per barrel, is half what it was a year ago.

COAL OUTPUT

Western Pennsylvania production of bituminous coal continues in moderate volume and prices show no improvement. Run of mine coal is quoted per net ton at mines as follows: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; steam slack, 90 cents to $1.10; gas slack, $1 to $1.25.

Jobbers report collections still averaging slow and no particular improvement appears likely in the near future.

Wool Consumption Declines in May

STOCK MARKET ADJUSTMENT NEAR END

Corporate Financier Says Careful Investments Now Will Reap Large Benefits

NEW YORK, June 28 — Completion of the present period of adjustment in the security market within the next month and the laying of the foundation for gradual recovery of prices in the later months of 1930 is the forecast of the head of a large corporation which is a substantial holder of securities. The buying of carefully selected issues this month will reap the benefit during the following year.

It is not his feeling that a sharp advance from this level is to be expected; there may be quick and violent advances and declines but at the immediate time in prices will likely possibly not even firm prices. This is an opportunity for the investor to take advantage while the general public is filled with uneasiness.

PATIENCE NECESSARY

One of the dangers of the situation for the investor is that of giving too close attention to the existing appearance of the share markets; in the opinion of this executive. The investor would be well advised to avoid too close scrutiny of current price fluctuations and of present business reports emphatically he should take care not to become too impatient. Rather he should look ahead and make the basis of his stock purchases corporation earnings dividends prospective as well as current and probable future of the company.

MONEY AND BUILDING

Narrow swings of the market discernible betterment in business are not dependable indices of the future.

An important phase of prosperity is new construction. He believes that cheap money will be a big factor in turning building activity upward before winter and that it will be active next year. Residential building is currently depressed but public works are active while new construction by utilities continues at a high level.

Rumored Local Bank Changes Called Untrue

By B. C. FORBES

SO FAR AS I can ascertain, every one of the many rumors concerning New York banking changes is without foundation.

WHAT EVERYBODY expects rarely happens. Everybody today is prepared to see commodity prices sink still lower. To see stock prices drag drably through a colorless summer, and to see no real improvement in business until fall or winter.

Well, events may fool them. We have had spirited industrial pick ups in summer before now. Vigorous stock market advances in summer have not been unknown. When basic commodities fall below cost of production, they are just as apt to rebound in summer as in any other season.

I DON'T KNOW how it is with you, but in the last couple of weeks some of the people I have talked with have exhibited a little more cheerfulness than formerly.

Here and there are manufacturers who report a slight pick up in demand. Retailers who report a modest increase in customers, salesmen who find prospects not quite so stony.

Perhaps the wish is father to the thought, but I, for one, would not be amazed were July and August to prove somewhat less disappointing than May and June.

HOW DRASTIC the deflation has been in the stock market is strikingly illustrated by this sentence from a stock exchange firm's (Frazer, Jelke & Co.) letter:

"At its recent low, Kroger was selling for 17 per cent of its 1929 high, Chrysler 18 per cent, Columbia Graphophone 19 per cent, Montgomery Ward 21 per cent, United Aircraft 26 per cent, International Telephone 27 per cent, Radio 28 per cent; International Nickel 29 per cent, Anaconda 31 per cent, American Rolling Mill 35 per cent, Kennecott 36 per cent, Electric Bond and Share 37 per cent, General Motors 42 per cent, Union Carbide 43 per cent, Woolworth 49 per cent, National Dairy Products 52 per cent, Electric Auto Lite 50 per cent, Consolidated Gas 54 per cent, United States Steel 58 per cent and New York Central 60 per cent."

It was no more dangerous to be stampeded into buying stocks at their last year's tops than it is safe to buy them at their low figures of this year. The mob was wrong then. Mob selling at recent current panicky quotations will doubtless prove equally shortsighted.

To express it differently, stocks stand just as much chance of advancing from their current low levels as they did of declining from their last year's tops.

ONE ABLE SON succeeded an able father as president of a very important enterprise this week, when J. Dugald White became president of J. G. White & Co., Inc., investment bankers, his father, J. G. White, becoming chairman of the board.

The new president has had thorough training. A graduate of Cornell University, he served as captain in the Three Hundred and Sixty-ninth Infantry in France and was decorated with the Croix de Guerre. After the armistice he was attached to the military organization which endeavored to determine the extent of allied war damages for the American commission to negotiate peace.

Although only 41, he has been a vice president of the company for 11 years. He is also an officer or director in many other companies, including its affiliates in addition to the three J. G. Frosted Goods Considered Valuable Adjunct to General Foods, Inc.

Steady investment demand has been evidenced for General Foods in recent sessions, with buying purported to have come from interests in a position to recognize the potential market possibilities it possesses. The patented freezing process, which it controls and which will undoubtedly serve as a valuable adjunct to the growth in earnings, is shortly expected to be placed on the market, with negotiations now in progress with the Great Atlantic and Pacific stores for the distribution of frosted foods in the 15,000 retail outlets of the latter chain. It is estimated that this proposed arrangement will add from 10 to 20 per cent to the total sales volume of General Foods, and will result in a corresponding increase in net income. Current market prices are but slightly above the $50 level at which the company is permitting employes to purchase the stock, which provides a return of slightly under 6 per cent.

The decision of American Tobacco to split its common shares on a two for one basis, has turned attention of the trading element to the next prominent issue in line for a recapitalization, namely Eastman Kodak. The company ranks as the largest manufacturer of cameras and photographic supplies in the world, and through active research work is constantly increasing its products. The company has no funded debt and the common stock is its only capital liability. Earnings are reported to be maintaining the steady upturn which has characterized its operations in past years, and it is more than likely that the $10.26 per common share, shown for 1929, will be exceeded in the current 12 months. The stock is substantially below its high for the year, and with the market apparently emerging from its recent unsettlement, the process of discounting the expected splitup could very easily restore this blue chip to higher price levels.

It would seem reasonable to assume that the average corporation which has made a practice of lending large sums of surplus funds in the call market in the last year or two, hardly finds conditions in that direction offering much in the way of profit. A year ago many corporations were realizing handsome additional income from such operations, but then rates for call loans were ruling between 8 and 10 per cent as compared with the prevailing 2 per cent rate. Under present conditions it would seem likely that the majority of corporations who had been active in the money market could employ their funds much more advantageously by investing them in securities or perhaps through using such funds to reduce their own outstanding capitalizations.

The altered situation in the money market must ultimately work to stimulate a broadening of general business activity. Only a few days ago a prominent Middle Western banker asserted that interior borrowers at small centers were not feeling the effects of the ease in money at the larger cities. This condition should be subject to marked change in the course of time for several reasons. First and foremost among such reasons, is the fact that interior banks who kept huge balances here over a long period of high money rates certainly can no longer find this market attractive for such capital. Low rates here should tend to drive such funds homeward and ultimately into productive enterprise.

The weekly reserve statements merely tended to emphasize the ease of the credit situation. The ratio of the system now stands at 83.7 per cent against 78.3 per cent last year, and that of the New York bank at 88.9 per cent against 77.2 per cent a year ago. Though the banks took recourse to rediscounting facilities rather liberally for the first time in months, presumably encouraged by the 2½ per cent bank rate put in force here a week ago, the total of reserve credit outstanding was reduced by $25,000,000 due to shrinkage in holdings of bills and government securities.

One of yesterday's surprises took the form of a distinctly firmer tone in the demand money market following the drop in the demand rate Thursday to 1½ per cent, the lowest charge for day-to-day accommodation reached since early 1917. Money was firmer at 2 per cent, the renewal figure yesterday. The shift in the situation was due to the heavy calling of loans, estimated to have run as high as $70,000,000 by the end of the third hour. Money brokers were a trifle perplexed by this huge withdrawal, realizing, of course, the approach of the time for mid-year disbursements. It was rather generally assumed that the bulk of the call represented withdrawal of funds by "others," presumably in preparation for mid-year needs, and perhaps influenced by the decidedly less favorable position of such lenders as a result of low rates and recent changes.

Gas Men Optimistic As Convention Ends

OIL CITY, Pa., June 28.—With 300 delegates attending the closing sessions, the Pennsylvania Gas Men's Association convention ended here. A forum, in which business conditions were discussed was held.

Gas officials were agreed that the industry had made progress this year in the face of adverse conditions in others. Confidence in the business situation this autumn was expressed.

UTILITY SHARES FORGOTTEN IN BEAR DRIVE

Long Term Strength of Service Stocks Ignored In Weak Market Period

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Real economic conditions vary infinitely more slowly than appraisals of them at the stock exchange.

In periods of bull market elation there is, for example, a widespread appreciation of the potentialities for continued steady growth of electrical utilities. But in the bear liquidation of recent weeks there has been a tendency to forget the elements of long-term strength in selected public utility investments.

Accordingly, it was timely of William J. Hagenah, vice president of the Byllesby Engineering and Management Corporation, Chicago, to turn our minds to the actual performance of utilities under state regulation.

Mr. Hagenah said:

"No single force has contributed more toward improving service and reducing rates than the consolidation of utility control and management that has come about so rapidly under state regulation. This development is the outgrowth of the constant urge under regulation for better service and lower rates and the pressure for economies that make such improvements and reductions possible. Consolidation among utilities has resulted from the same influences that brought about consolidations in private industry, except that utility combinations have been distinctly more beneficial to the public because they seek the same desirable ends that state regulation does, and they accomplish these more speedily and more effectively than would otherwise be possible."

BENEFITS GREAT

Special pleading, you may say, but at this stage of the psychological cycle the public needs to be reminded what the genius of American management has accomplished in the past and will accomplish in the future.

As for public benefits, Mr. Hagenah added:

"These developments have brought great benefits to the public. The utilities serving the larger cities generally possess ample resources and managerial skill, but the smaller communities can obtain the necessary credit, adequate service and low rates only through the facilities which the holding company operations and centralized management provide. Analyses of holding company operations disclose that the great majority of the communities served by them have populations of less than 5,000 while many of them are less than 1,000 population. A large percentage of the population of the United States resides in such communities, which are more and more being supplied from a network of transmission lines.

"Although offering little business inducement when standing alone, they furnish, when thus combined, a solid background for a great industry from which all interests benefit. Because of this development limited hour service has given way to continuous service; adequate service has been supplied where none was available before; obsolete and poorly-constructed distribution systems have been replaced with efficient systems, and unscientific rates have been discarded in favor of properly balanced schedules that stimulate the maximum use of the service."

MILLIONS SAVED

Upholding the present type of regulation and by insinuation at least opposing federal regulation, Mr. Hagenah concluded:

"The entire industry is today in a sense competing with itself in the search for still wider uses for electricity and for means by which rates can be further reduced to invite such new uses. All this has come about by a genuine faith of the public in this industry, encouraged and protected by the law, and through the regulatory work of the state commissions. Millions of dollars have in this manner been saved to electric consumers each year through voluntary reductions. To talk of inflated property values and threatened rate increases in the face of these facts is sheer nonsense.

"The economic welfare of the country presses altogether in the opposite direction. With the law and the practice of regulation now firmly established, with the duties of the utilities and the obligations of the public better understood, long drawn out and expensive hate controversies are disappearing in favor of thousands of informal conferences between company officials and the state commissions seeking the prompt application of established rules to developing situations."

KEEN BIDDING FOR WESTERN PLAYERS

TO PLUG THE holes caused by the loss of star players for long periods through illness and injury, or to bolster teams that have failed to come up to expectations, the major league baseball chiefs are starting a big drive in their favorite hunting grounds, the Pacific Coast League, in an attempt to acquire the immediate services of players who have been starring there since the opening of the present season. The recent deals in which the Yankees bought Outfielder Meryl Hoag from Sacramento for a reported price of $75,000 and the Giants purchased Outfielder Harry Rosenberg from the Missions for $25,000 are likely to be followed in short order by several others.

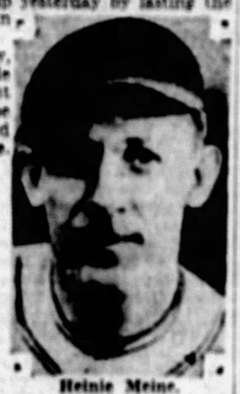
Joe Devine.

No fewer than 10 scouts from the big show are now on the ground trying to buy the leading pastimers outright or at least to get options on them at staggering prices. Joe Devine, as usual, is looking after the interests of the Pittsburgh club, but whether any early purchases will be made by the Pirate owners is a question. Like other moguls, they had an eye on Frank Crosetti, San Francisco shortstop, but have cooled on the proposition of buying him since receiving reports that he has fallen off in the work that was so brilliant in the spring.

THE CUBS, INDIANS and Athletics are still on Crosetti's trail, however, and when he is finally sold the price is likely to be close to $100,000. Johnny Vergez, Oakland's slugging third baseman, is another for whom there will be some spirited bidding, and still another is Tony Freitas, left-hand pitcher of Sacramento, who won nine of his first 10 games.

Outfielder Ike Boone, who failed three times in the majors, was sought by the Robins, but San Francisco's price of $25,000 was considered too steep, so Brooklyn decided instead to buy Buzz Arlett, of Oakland, 32 years old, for $15,000 and two players. Pitchers Howard Craghead and Pete Daglia, both right-handers, are said to be ticketed for Yankee berths sooner or later, and other clubs are interested in Pitchers Chester and Lieber of the Missions. It is estimated that the big league men will pay out more than $350,000 for the cream of the season's crop on the coast.

THE MEMBERS OF Pittsburgh's reduced pitching staff began to show staying qualities just when something of the sort was most urgently needed. Heinie Meine, kept it up yesterday by lasting the route for only the second time this year in eight starts.



Heinie Meine.

With Remy Kremer used on Wednesday, Manager Ens had only five hurlers available for the five games with the Phillies, and it looked as if some doubling up would be necessary, but the home hurlers proceeded to display endurance in the nick of time.

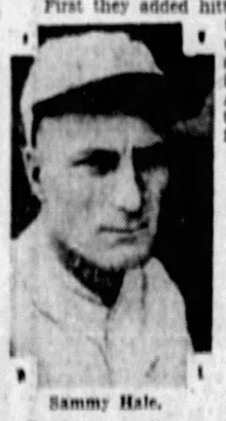
AS A RESULT, the Bucs have managed to get by the first three games of the series with the use of only three pitchers, something that had appeared very improbable. Whether Lean Chagnon and Glenn Spencer can go the route in today's dual bill is another question—incidentally, it will be the first time that Spencer has started a game—but at least the situation is far better than it would have been if French, Brame or Meine had fallen down in earlier numbers. Starting with Kremer's performance on Wednesday, the Bucs, in hanging up their four straight victories, their longest winning streak since they took four in a row on May 17, 18, 20 and 21, have seen their pitchers last the distance four times in succession. At only one other stage of the present season has Manager Ens been able to go through four games in a row without changing hurlers. And that was a long way back, embracing the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth games of the year.

AMONG THE PITTSBURGH boys starring in the minor baseball loops this year none is standing out more impressively than Frank Rodgers, center fielder and leading slugger of the New Haven club in the Eastern League. The work of this local product has been of such a high grade as to promise rapid advancement.

Ever since the season opened Rodgers has been leading his league in home runs. He now has 17 to his credit. He has batted in more than 50 runs and is right up among the leaders in that important department. His play in other respects has been in keeping with his hard and timely hitting, and a brilliant future in faster company is being predicted for him all over the circuit.

EVEN IF THOSE Senators do not win the American League pennant, the management must be given credit for a smart and wide-awake policy. The Washington bosses certainly have not overlooked any bets in trying to improve the team's chances.

First they added hitting strength to the outfield and bolstered the pitching staff by acquiring Heinie Manush and Alvin Crowder; next they guarded against a weakening on the part of the ageing Joe Judge, at first base, by obtaining Art Shires, and now they've tried to brace the infield reserve force by making a play for Sammy Hale.



Sammy Hale.

RECENTLY THE BROWNS asked waivers on Hale, whom they obtained from the A's last winter in a trade for Catcher Wally Schang. Sammy hadn't measured up as a regular in St. Louis, but Walter Johnson and Clark Griffith figured that by reason of his experience he would be far more helpful to the Senators in infield emergency roles than the youthful Jimmy McLeod. So they refused to waive on the veteran and put in a claim for him. St. Louis is said to have withdrawn the waiver request, so the indications are that Washington will not get the player, but that does not lessen the credit due the Senatorial chiefs for being on the alert to grab every bit of material that might be of help in the pennant fight. It's the policy that wins, and even though the Senators may not finish on top this year it cannot be said that they have not been handled just as smartly as any club in either big league.

PLAYING FOR RAIN is an old stall in baseball. Playing for the law is the latest. That's the charge made against the Tigers by the Red Sox management in a protest to President E. S. Barnard, of the American League, in connection with the second game of last Sunday's double-header in Boston.

The Massachusetts Sunday sports law prohibits playing after 6 p. m., and the Boston club charges that after a three-run rally gave the Tigers a 4-to-2 lead in the fifth inning Bucky Harris and Waite Hoyt purposely delayed the game so that it had to be called at the end of the sixth. The Tiger manager and pitcher was accused of having adopted stalling tactics to hold up the game with the object of taking advantage of the Sunday law and depriving the Red Sox of a chance to tie or pass Detroit's score.

DESPITE the fact that she has retired from competition again this year, Miss Joyce Wethered still is the greatest woman golfer of the present or any other time, according to American players and

CO-MEDALISTS CLASH TODAY FOR CROWN

By VERN SWARTSFAGER.

It is said that medalists in golf tournaments, particularly titular contests, are jinxed—not so in the National Intercollegiate Golf championship which is being brought to a close today at the Oakmont Country Club, for in the 36-hole finale are Lawrence Moller, senior at Notre Dame, and George T. Dunlap, Jr., who has another year at Princeton before he graduates.

Battling in the upper and lower brackets where they had been seeded in the draw following their low scoring of 153 for the qualifying test, the pair of them worked nobly through the first, second, quarter final and semi-final rounds before they stepped out this morning to determine which was the best fitted to wear the kingly crown and to sit upon the austere throne held for the past year by Tommy Aycock, of Yale, who left school and was unable to defend his laurels.

TIED FOR MEDAL

Not having played off for the medal, the finalists also are playing to decide that issue.

Moller, by virtue of his stiff tests in the upper bracket, in which he put out Phillips Finley, of Harvard, in a spectacular 37-hole semi-final match yesterday, Marshall W. Forrest, captain of the Yale team and runner-up in the same title event last year, 2 and 1, in the quarter finals; Fred Brand, Jr., the local hope from Penn State, 3 and 2, in the second round, and George McWilliams, of Princeton, 3 and 2, in the first match, is faced with the most difficult test of all—that of beating a man who has matched him at medal play, and who has played slightly better golf, though in a weaker bracket, in his preliminary match play rounds.

Most of the reserve Moller may have had stored for such a match as he may have foreseen for today was dropped in the bucket when he was taken to the thirty-seventh hole yesterday, after he apparently had the contest sewed up in the regulation number of holes.

EAST-WEST MATCH

His opponent in the semi-final, Winston Fuller, of the University of Southern California, suffering from unexpected illness, Dunlap had little trouble in coming through with a handy 8-and-7 victory yesterday after having eliminated in turn Al Brodbeck, of Penn, 2 and 1, in the first round; Mac Burnett, the husky Texan, 5 and 3, in the second, and Samuel M. Parks, Jr., of Pitt, lone remaining local contestant, 3 and 2, in the quarter-final round.

And so today's final again has brought an East vs. West match.

Seldom in the 34 years of intercollegiate championship golf has there been a semi-final match waged as bitterly as that which saw Finley miss a putt and Moller sink his of the same distance for a birdie 4 on the thirty-seventh hole of their penultimate round set-to yesterday.

If Mr. Hoodoo was in any one's corner at all he was not in the co-medalists. From the outset the pair played closely, being all even at the turn yesterday morning, and all square again as they went to lunch. Each had taken 38 out and 39 back for 77's, only five more than par. The sparks started to fly after luncheon, however, as Moller promptly set out to eliminate Finlay, having the Harvard man 4 down when they reached the twenty-fourth hole in winning the nineteenth, twenty-second, twenty-third and twenty-fourth.

PITT DOUBLES STARS LOSE

HAVERFORD, Pa., June 28.—(AP.)—The last of the Californians was squeezed out of the national intercollegiate singles tennis championship yesterday while a player from the deep South and another from the East remain to clash for the title today.

Dolf Muehleisen, of the University of California, at Berkeley, met defeat in the semi-finals, but forced that strategist from Lehigh University, Julius Seligson, to struggle through five sets before he succumbed. The scores were 6-1, 4-6, 6-2, 12-10, 6-4.

Seligson, seeded No. 1, and winner of this tournament two years ago, clashes in the final tomorrow with Clifford Sutter, of Tulane University, who yesterday defeated Donald Cram, of Vanderbilt University, 6-2, 6-1, 6-4.

Seligson and Sutter will play for the title Berkeley Bell, of the University of Texas, won last year. Bell is with the United States Davis Cup team in Europe.

California was not shut out of the picture altogether, however, for the doubles team of Muehleisen and Robert Muenich, of the University of California, at Berkeley, defeated Eddiee Jacobs and David O'Loughlin, of Pittsburgh, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3, 8-6, in one of the semi-finals.

This pair will meet in the final today Stanley Almquist and Sherman Lockwood, of Oregon University, who triumphed over Sutter and Maurice Bayon, of Tulane, 10-12, 6-4, 6-4, 5-7, 7-5 in the other semi-final.

YANKS ADVANCE AT WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England, June 28.—(AP.)—Three youthful Americans rose to brilliant tennis heights yesterday to stroke their way into the quarter-final round of the Wimbledon championships as they dealt a blow to England's titular aspirations.

Wilbur Allison, and the equally youthful Johnny Doeg and Gregory Mangin, of Newark, N. J., won their way into the last eight along with Henri Cochet, the wiry little defending champion from France, at the expense of the English. Big Bill Tilden, the ace of the American invaders, and George Lott, United States No. 4 ranking player, may increase the United States representation in the final eight to five, when they meet their British Empire opponents in the fourth round today.

MRS. MOODY WINS

Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Miss Helen Jacobs, America's ranking women stars, also sailed through their matches yesterday, each losing one game. Mrs. Moody made short work of her match with Miss M. Canter, Holland star, 6-0, 6-1, while Miss Jacobs defeated Mrs. W. D. List, of England, by the same score.

Of the three American men who won today, Mangin had the hardest fight and covered himself with the greatest glory by defeating H. W. (Bunny) Austin, Britain's foremost single star, 9-7, 10-8, 6-3.

Allison and G. P. Hughes, English Davis cup member, carried on an exciting match, each batting for the advantage at the net but the swift Texan finally emerged with the honors winning 4-6, 6-1, 6-3.

DOEG DOWNS DAVID

Doeg's powerful southpaw service and volleying compensated for his lapses on ground strokes and the Californian brought in the third American singles victory as he defeated H. F. David, of England, 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

America's supremacy in the singles failed to carry over into the doubles although the invaders from across the Atlantic managed to get an even break.

A return to the same kind of form that kept them out in front in the early part of the race had the Pirates in a cheery frame of mind today as they made ready for another bargain bill with the Phearless Phils. The doubleheader will get under way at Forbes Field at 2 o'clock.

The Freebooters, on top of their fourth straight victory, were crowding the first division this morning, they being only one-half game removed from the fourth-place Cardinals.

Manager Ens intends to ask Remy Kremer to pitch the first contest, despite Frenchy's appearance on the mound in Wednesday's victory over the Buccos. The boss of the club is in such dire straits for pitchers that the move surely is justified, and Kremer, ever a willing worker, will be glad to take the slip. Glenn Spencer may be on the mound in the second fight. Manager Shotten stated he would use Chester Nichols and Ray Benge on the slab.

BUCS GOING WELL

The Buccos are playing like champs these days, yet the club has the smallest roster in the league. In yesterday's scrap with the Quakers, the home boys flashed more of the pleasing form, they winning, 6 to 4, with Heinie Meine going the full distance on the slab. It was the fourth time in three days that a Pittsburgh sharpshooter had started and finished a game.

The dual attraction of today will wind up the series with the Phillies. The Buccos will play an exhibition game in Akron tomorrow and on Monday will take on the Braves.

The Oaklanders had to have the advantage of the breaks to win over the Phillies yesterday. They put the game on the ice in the seventh round when they scored three runs, while making only one hit, and it an infield tap. Tommy Thevenow's fumble in the round and a passed ball by Catcher Virgil Davis enabled the Buccos to have their big inning.

Frank O'Doul was the most active athlete in the contest, the league's best hitter making four extra-base hits. O'Doul connected for two three-baggers and two two-suckers and he showed the fans how a good hitter can scatter his punches to left and right.

Nick Altrock Says:

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Say, this guy Shires is all right. When he joined our Washington club I thought we'd all have to wear ear-laps to let ourselves think. But I would rather have "What-a-Man" on the club than Floyd Gibbons or Graham McNamee. Those babies would give me an earache in two seconds flat. Shires and I get along fine. I only use pantomime for doing my stuff, so when Art the Great cuts loose with a million words, he isn't infringing on my rights. We both gnaw at the same hunk of eating tobacco. I'll be sleeping with the guy yet.

YOUNGSTERS STAR AS REDS DOWN BRAVES

YANKS FLASH ROOKIE ACE IN WERBER

Associated Press

Cincinnati's fans are getting a chance to appraise the work of a few of the year's most promising newcomers to National League circles.

While the Boston Braves are playing at Cincinnati there is a chance to compare the play of Wally Berger and Buster Chatham with that of Jersey Joe Stripp of Cincinnati. The Boston youngsters are going at a great rate, Berger tying Hack Wilson for the league's home-run leadership, while Stripp, who failed in previous attempts to remain in the major leagues, still is one of Cincinnati's most effective batters although he no longer is threatening the leaders. And yesterday the Red Sox had a thrilling game tossed in for good measure with Cincinnati winning, 7 to 6, in the ninth inning.

Chatham, who only came up about a month ago, led the assault on another star recruit, Benny Frey, by hitting three times in four attempts, and took a good part in Boston's five-run rally that tied the score in the eighth inning. He brought his average for the 23 games in which he has participated up to .367.

The New York Yankees also have produced a star newcomer in Shortstop Bill Werber, formerly of Duke University, although he failed to prevent a defeat at the hands of the Cleveland Indians. Werber, who was about to be sent to Albany when Lyn Lary was hurt a few days ago, stepped into the Yankee lineup and has been hitting steadily and fielding brilliantly.

The Indians came to life after losing five straight, pounded George Pipgras from the mound and won, 11 to 7. Babe Ruth's twenty-seventh home run of the year overshadowed the rest of the Yankee hitting.

The Yankee defeat proved a great aid to Washington, for the Senators moved a game away by beating Detroit, 6 to 4, in a duel between Al Crowder and Charley Sullivan. The Philadelphia Athletics spent the afternoon dividing a double header with the St. Louis Browns, tossing away the first game, 8 to 2, by committing five errors, and winning the second, 8 to 3, by means of hard and effective clouting against Chad Kimsey. The Chicago-Boston game was rained out.

Brooklyn's lead in the National league likewise suffered severe damage and the Chicago Cubs cut it from two games to one by winning the second contest of their "first place" series, 7 to 5 in 10 innings. Kiki Cuyler's home run with Bush on base in the tenth broke up the deadlocked struggle.

Pittsburgh, which won its first double-header of the season Thursday, threatened to take a place in the first division by defeating the Phillies for the third time, 6 to 4.

The Pirates were left only a half game behind the fourth place St. Louis Cardinals, who lost their second straight to the New York Giants, 9 to 4. Four St. Louis errors aided the Giants while Fred Fitzsimmons held the Cards in check.

TWO FEATURE RACES LISTED

Two feature events head the program at the Bridgeville Speedway this evening. The ninth brings a good field together to contest for the Sunset Cabin Cup, a beautiful silver cup to the owner of the winning hound. In the eighth event the cream of this section of the country will clash over the futurity distance.

Lightning Flash, favorite and winner of his last start, will probably be the public choice. Post position will play the big part in the race.

Bootlegger sprinted to victory in the feature race at New Kensington last night, winning the Harrison Township cup race. The winner paid $10.60 to win.

Sport Vignettes

The dog-racing fad is spreading in this state . . . A new track will be opened in Aspinwall within a week and another one is to be built between Scranton and Wilkes-Barre . . . Meanwhile, New Kensington and Bridgeville continue to roll merrily on playing to large nightly crowds . . . If you see a flock of young men in shorts running about the streets today, they're in the Irish Day Marathon race to Kennywood Park . . . A winning streak is a winning streak, whether or not it's against the Phillies, as any of the Pirates will tell you . . . They say Jack Quinn, veteran spitball pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, is only 46 years old, but that didn't prevent a middle-aged fan from dashing up to the man on the press gate at Shibe Park in Philadelphia last Fourth of July and ask for his tickets, working a gag . . . "Your tickets?" was the comeback: "I don't seem to place you." . . . "Didn't my father leave them for me? I'm Jack Quinn's son," said the fan . . . Now, any gate man can take a joke, but this one couldn't see how even the ancient Quinn could have a son older than himself, hence the bum's rush that followed . . . Quinn tells a "Believe It Or Not" on himself. . . . It happened when he was pitching for Hazleton, in the hard coal region, one day and had a lot of smoke on the ball. He fanned five batters in one inning, but the catcher couldn't hold the ball and four runs were scored before Jack could get the side out . . . Johnny Datto, the Filipino, of Cleveland, who boxes Jackie Rodgers, the local Negro knockout star, in the main bout at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, next Monday night, is an even tougher puncher than Jackie himself . . . He has beaten a lot of good ones in his time, and Pete Zivic, who has been stopped by both, casts his vote for the almond-eyed one as the better socker of the pair . . . As a result of the assaulting of a referee at a show in Newark, a movement is under way to have the boxing law abolished in New Jersey . . . The recent epidemic of unsatisfactory big bouts in the East will give State Senator Frank D. Abell, who is behind the movement, plenty of fuel for his attack in the Legislature . . . Boxing also probably is through in West Virginia as a result of the death there the other day of a preliminary boxer following a bout . . . Boxing is illegal in that state and the fatality put the promoters in a bad spot . . . Night baseball is going over big among the sandlotters in Philadelphia and apparently has come to stay there . . . Beginning with next Monday night's show, the Meyers Bowl management is trying an experiment which it hopes will draw out the fans in more copious quantities than hitherto this season . . . It consists of showing the best local talent against good out-of-town opponents in the windups . . . The week following the Datto-Rodgers show comes one featuring a return bout between Buck McTiernan and Farmer Joe Cooper. Both cards should attract good crowds.—HARRY KECK.

RACES POSTPONED

GOTHENBURG, Sweden, June 28.—(AP.)—The fourth day of racing for the international gold cup, emblem of six-meter yacht supremacy, was called off yesterday when the eight competing boats failed to complete the course in the maximum time of four hours. The United States was leading at the time of the suspension.

DARK HORSES GAIN W. PA., SEMI-FINALS

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

Sam Harbison, rangy ace of Sewickley and Princeton, stands alone in defense of Pittsburgh laurels in the semi-final round of men's singles in the forty-second annual Western Pennsylvania tennis championships on the courts of the Stanton Heights Golf Club this afternoon. Pitted against the Tiger comet in the upper sector of the draw looms W. P. Haseltine, youthful Philadelphian, who yesterday tallied two spectacular upsets by downing Billy O'Loughlin, Pitt Freshman flash, and Paul Hicks, star of Edgewood, while Harbison was carving out straight set triumph over Billy Ramsay, Uniontown and Lafayette College crack.

In the lower half, Fred Rudisill, York star, and Monty Ganger, versatile young Clevelander, will clash, Rudisill having conquered Dr. John O'Loughlin, P. A. A. mainstay and 1928 West Penn premier, in a three-set quarter-final tilt as Ganger first bumped decisively Jack Beatty, sturdy Stanleonian leader, then out-hit and out-maneuvered Frank Smith, Edgewood captain, in the following frame.

DOPE UPSET

Never before in the history of district competition has there occurred such a deluge of dope reversals as has been featured the past two days on the Stanton lot. Beginning Thursday with the dethronement of Champion Byron Baur by Harbison and continuing through the downfalls of the O'Loughlins, Hicks, Ramsay, Beatty, and Smith, the jousting has not only been shaken loose from reigning local favorites, but has even turned up the almost unprecedented situation of a semi-final bracket with but one seeded performer remaining. And, be it added, Ganger, the sole seeded survivor, was ranked last on the select rating list!

Harbison's win over Ramsay was quite impressive. Ramsay's game lacks the severity that characterized it a few years ago, but it is steadier than ever. Harbison, however, possessed both the pace and the precision to overcome his rival's consistency and the 6-3, 6-3 result pretty nearly tells the tale.

HASELTINE RALLIES

Haseltine was down, 6-3, to Billy O'Loughlin in the concluding set. But give up he would not. Presently the diminutive Pittsburgher slipped a notch or two in the stiff wind that made fast stroking hazardous and it was not long ere Haseltine, by dint of keeping the sphere in play and permitting his opponent to err, had squared the going and run out the contest, 14-12, 3-6, 7-5.

Dr. O'Loughlin engaged in a ripping 10-8 set with McCook Reed to wind up a melee held over from Thursday evening before meeting Rudisill in the quarter-finals. The Winged Head racqueteer buzzed away with set one from his York opponent, 6-3, but as the keen edge wore off the O'Loughlin onslaught, Rudisill's superlative steadiness made itself felt.

GANGER STEADY

Ganger carried too wide a variety of artillery for Beatty and Smith, neither the former's pace and barrier assault, nor the latter's back court safety style proving effective against the chops, drives and all-around game of the Clevelander. Beatty went under at 6-2, 6-4, and Smith at 6-2, 6-2.

Dorothy Jarvis, Sewickley lass and 1927 titleholder, entered the women's singles semi-finals along with Vida Hurst, Pittsburgh girl, and Mrs. Winifred Eschner, Erie luminary. Miss Jarvis had difficulty in downing Rose Straub, of Johnstown, 8-6, 6-3, and Mrs. Eschner had considerably more in nosing out Helen Carson, promising little Greensburg southpaw, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4. Miss Hurst cared for Catherine Cole, another Greensburger, 6-1, 6-1.

Favored teams in men's doubles fought through early round engagements successfully, the Baur-Ramsey, Bialas-Chantler, and John O.Loughlin-McElroy pairings heading the procession into the quarter finals as the Harbison-Barber, Beatty-Spindler, and Reed-Hicks combines moved into the third canto.

DUNLAP PLAYS MOLLER FOR TITLE

It was at that point Finlay made a right-about, knocking Moller off on five straight holes. Moller evened the match again at the thirtieth, and they halved the thirty-first in 3's. And from that point, there was news to talk about.

EVEN AT 33RD

Finlay finished his drive from thirty-second tee. A beautiful No. 2 iron sent Finlay's ball on the green—but the wind and a hook carried it off into a trap on the left. Moller's second was fine, and Finlay's out-shot was straight to the pin—and when both of them needed two putts, the Notre Dame lad was 1 up. Finlay again evened things by winning the thirty-third.

The thirty-fourth was a spectacular hole. Finlay's spoon shot refused to fade and it landed on the edge of the woods below the green. Moller put a beautiful stroke 30 feet from the cup from the tee. The superb recovery of Finlay, who used a niblic to pitch his ball within six feet of the pin, was a crushing blow for Moller, but he won the hole as he deserved with a par 3.

But the most remarkable hole of the entire championship was the thirty-sixth, where a halved hole would have given the Notre Dame favorite an earlier victory. His drive was long and straight down the middle. Finlay hooked away over to the left in a shallow trap. Phillips' next stroke was a master-shot of 125 yards that stopped on the edge of a ditch just back of the green. The door was wide open for Moller, but he dubbed one into the trap on the right and succeeded in making it harder by over-running the cup into the rough in the left just off the green. Finlay won the hole with a 5 to Moller's 6.

WINS IN 37

Finlay's drive sliced into the right rough, while Moller was well down the middle to the left from the thirty-seventh tee, Finlay put his short of the green, and Moller was hole high to the right in the rough. Finlay's chip was four feet from the cup, and Moller matched it. Laying alike, with the same distance to cover for a half and another extra hole, Finlay's stroke rimmed the right side and stayed out. Moller made his, and it was all over.

The significant part of the Dunlap-Fuller match was Dunlap's marvelous golf. After having gone out in 40, the Princetonian played, beginning at the ninth, 20 consecutive holes even with Old Man Par. His incoming nine of the morning was 35 and he was out in 37.

Dunlap had Fuller 1 up at the end of nine holes, 6 up at the end of 18, and 7 up at the twenty-seventh.

BUCS, PHILLIES CLASH TWICE

went into the inning with a four-run lead. With one out, Pie Traynor made a two-base wild throw on Southern's grounder. John Sherlock was erased, but O'Doul connected for his second three-bagger, and Frank rode over the plate a moment later when Chuck Klein singled. Meine made Pinkey Whitney hoist a foul to Rolly Hemsley to end the fight.

Claude Willoughby worked six frames against the Pirates, he being relieved by Ace Elliott after the former had been thrown into the seventh-inning jam.

MRS. THOMPSON WINS.

BALTIMORE, June 28.—(AP.)—Mrs. De Lloyd Thompson, of Washington, Pa., yesterday won the 1930 women's tennis tournament championship, defeating Miss Eleanor Cottman, of Baltimore, 4-6, 9-7, 9-7. The match was closely contested all the route, both players fighting gamely until the final stroke.

DENNING VICTOR.

PORTSMOUTH, Va., June 28.—(AP.)—Jake Denning, of Norfolk, former Navy light-heavyweight, won the decision over Sammy Weiss, of Allentown and Philadelphia, in their 10-round feature bout before the Oasis Athletic Club here last night. Denning had the best of the fight all the way.

critics returning to this country from the big British tournaments.

After seeing her play in a mixed foursome in which she was paired with Bobby Jones to defeat her brother, Roger, and Dale Bourn, former English amateur champion, and also in several other informal events, the Americans are a unit in declaring that she is in even better form than ever before and so far superior to all other women players as to leave no room for comparison.

Joyce Wethered.

MISS WETHERED is playing such remarkable golf, in fact, that she was urged to enter the British amateur championship tournament. No woman has ever played for the amateur championship on either side of the Atlantic, but it is admitted that Miss Wethered is the first who could do so with a fair chance of winning. "On the day before the Walker Cup matches started, she could have beaten any player on either team," says George Von Elm. The woman star declined to enter the big tourney, however, and it develops that she has also again declined an invitation to visit the United States. "I'll tell you what my secret plans are," she said. "When I am gray-haired and old and can really enjoy golf, it is my great ambition to visit America and play on all your important courses. But until I am old and gray-haired I think I shall not cross the ocean. You see, I have not reached the stage where golf is pure fun and nothing more." Miss Wethered says she quit tournament golf on account of the strain. During the women's British tourney last year she lost 16 pounds.

FRANK (DUNDEE) ROGERS

ROX PLAYER SENSATION

Frank (Dundee) Rodgers, a McKees Rocks product, is one of the sensations of the Eastern League, playing center field for the New Haven club, which obtained him from Hagerstown, of the Blue Ridge League, after he had played with Frederick in the latter loop for two seasons. He made four home runs against Charleroi in the post-season series with the Mid-Atlantic League champions last year.

Rodgers is leading the Eastern League in home runs with 17 and also is among the leaders in stolen bases, sacrifice hits and driving in runs.

The youngster was honored, along with Toby Uanna, Pitt football ace, at a banquet given by Sto-Rox citizens at the Chartiers Heights Country Club last winter.

Elmer Yoter is the sponsor of Rodgers, having recommended him for his first minor league trial.

FIVE AWARDS ON LIST FOR JUNIORS

When Joe Stevenson, of Penn, Pa., a caddie at the Greensburg Country Club, copped the second Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, William Randolph Hearst junior amateur tourney last year, he was presented at a banquet a beautiful trophy which stood 14½ inches from top to base, with the figure of a golfer driving on it, a matched set of irons, and a solid gold medal, by James Malone, who was then president of City Council.

This year, when the third annual William Randolph Hearst Trophy tourney is held under the auspices of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph at the Schenley Park municipal links on Monday, July 7, the boy who is 19 years of age or under, an amateur who is not attending an institution of learning above preparatory grades, and cops the honors, will receive even better prizes—a trophy 26 inches high, a matched set of steel-shafted irons, and a solid gold medal.

FINE PRIZE LIST

If you play in the tournament, and are not fortunate enough to cop the top prize, which was won by Joe Curto, of Squirrel Hill two years ago with a 68, and last year by Stevenson with a 69, there are other prizes you may be able to win.

The runner-up will receive a steel-shafted driver, and a gold medal; third place victor will be awarded a mashie and a silver medal, while to fourth place will go a putter and a bronze medal.

To the high or preparatory school team of four men, and any school may enter more than one team, if properly specified, that has the lowest aggregate tally the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, William Randolph Hearst School team trophy will be awarded. The school itself will receive the beautiful silver loving cup that has been provided for the winner, but the boys on the winning team will receive gold medals emblematic of their triumph.

MEDALS FOR VICTORS

Last year the Castle Shannon Golf Club came through valiantly to cop the caddie club team trophy plaque—a beautiful plaque of gold and mahogany. The boys on the winning team will receive gold medals and those on the runner-up team silver medals. Professional Ben Loeffler is qualifying his caddies at the Valley Heights Country Club this morning.

Any boy fortunate enough to drop a hole in one, also will receive a gold medal.

And the nice part of it all is that it doesn't cost any boy a nickel to enter this big championship event—all you have to is provide your own clubs and balls, and come out and play your best. Send in your entry today—the lists close July 2, and no post-entries will be accepted.

WHICHONE OUT OF DWYER

NEW YORK, June 28.—(AP.)—Shorn of its color and glamour by the absence of Harry Payne Whitney's Whichone, the Dwyer stakes to be decided over the Aqueduct turf today is expected to be nothing more than a workout for Gallant Fox as he goes on unchallenged as the three-year-old champion.

Whichone was all set to go in the rich mile and a half jaunt—in fact he had been officially declared as a starter. Early yesterday, however, the brilliant son of Chicle was found to have two quarter cracks, an injury that will not only keep him out of the Dwyer but may prevent his matching strides with Gallant Fox in any of the remaining feature three

ERIE BOXERS VICTORS AT HICKEY PARK

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Erie fighters carried off the honors in the two 10-round bouts staged last night at Hickey Park, Millvale, when Ray Collins was awarded the decision over Andy Andrucci, of the East End in the main event, fought through a drizzling rain, and Tug Phillips outgeneraled and outpunched Johnny Smackey, of Canonsburg, in the other half of the double windup.

Phillips really won the honors in his bout, a hard-fought affair, on his ruggedness and harder hitting, but Collins got a break from the officials, who voted unanimously for him. Andrucci made this fight and won six of the 10 rounds after getting off to a bad start, including a knockdown for a count of nine from an overhand right to the jaw in the opening round. In this session, he also had his left eye draped in mourning and almost closed.

GOOD UPHILL BATTLE

Collins also won the second round and looked like an early victor by a knockout up to this time, but then he tired and Andrucci made a fine uphill battle of it to overcome the visitor's lead and forge ahead. Collins did not win another round after the second until the seventh, in which he outpunched Andrucci, and he made a strong rally to win the tenth, but he did so much uncovering after shooting his fight in the first two rounds that there was no question that Andrucci not only had outgamed him, but also had piled up a larger total of points. Incidentally, Andrucci's right eye was cut midway in the bout and this further handicapped him, but did not prevent him from continuing to carry the fight to his opponent every step of the way.

Georgie Bretsch, of the North Side, won by a technical knockout over Johnny Skorin, of Woods Run, in the fifth round of the second bout when Referee Al Grayber intervened as Bretsch was beginning to cut up his opponent, who had put up a good boxing exhibition up until that time making Bretsch miss many of his swings. They were scheduled for eight rounds.

BECKER SCORES KAYO

Al Becker, of Sheraden, knocked out Jerry Kucera, of Brentwood, in the fifth round, Kucera being counted out after having been down for counts of three and nine in the preceding session.

Joe Keally alternated with Al Grayber as referee, Lou Meininger and Frank Ferris were the judges and A. C. Couch was the timer. Henry Klaas was the announcer and Dr. M. R. Goldman was the commission physician at the ringside. The crowd was only fair in size, the show having been held over from the night before on account of rain.

Collins weighed 135½ pounds and Andrucci, 137; Phillips, 139½, and Smackey, 137¼. Bretsch, 145¾, and Skorin, 146½, and Becker, 151, and Kucera, 156½.

DATTO TO DRILL HERE

Johnny Datto, Filipino featherweight, of Cleveland, who boxes Jackie Rodgers, of the North Side, in the 10-round main bout at the Meyers Bowl Monday night, will work out in the Bowl ring tomorrow. He is due in town tomorrow morning.

Butch Jacobs and Frank Kladdick, middleweights, have been matched for one of the bouts on the open-air amateur boxing card at the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., Tuesday night.

ACES CHECK RELIANCE

By TOM BIRKS.

Reliance Life, racing along at a fast clip in the two sandlot baseball league races in which it is interested, ran into trouble last evening in a Greater Pittsburgh League tilt, the Homestead Aces hammering out an 18-to-8 victory.

In the City League, the Jimmy Smith club nosed out the J. L. Thomas nine, 5 to 4, and Book Shoe continued its fast pace by beating Pleasant Valley Smilers, 5 to 2.

Rieck-McJunkin downed the Carnegie Steel nine in the C. and I. circuit, 8 to 3, and in the Philadelphia Company League, Duquesne Light pounded out an 11-to-2 decision over the Equitable Gas entry.

Ingram turned back the Methodists in the Crafton-Ingram Church League, 4 to 3, and Fintex won over the Cosletts, 11-10, in a Central League fracas. North Bessemer won, 6-1, over Verona in the West Penn League.

Heading the independent card, Homewood took over Stowe, 4-1; Swissvale Firemen downed Soho Traders, 7-2, and Dan Heeps defeated Greensburg Miners, 3-0. Irwin plays at Greensburg against the Generals on July 4.

The Homestead Grays had easy sailing against Dormont, winning by a 10-to-0 score.

Campus Comment

—By KNUTE ROCKNE—

Chairman All-America Board of Track and Field.

MAJ. GRIFFITH SUGGESTS

The suggestion of Maj. John L. Griffith, commissioner of the Big Ten, to run the half and quarter-mile events with a staggered start around the first turn to run the sprints on the opposite side of the track so every spectator can see certainly is along the right line if they are to make track meets interesting for the spectator.

Knute Rockne

Griffith deserves a lot of credit for the many fine things he has done for athletics, and he will continue to contribute some clear thinking for the betterment of sport for many years to come.

In the athletic game we have first, the athletic statesman; secondly, the athletic politician, and then third, we have that large class who do not think.

Maj. Griffith is an athletic statesman—we need more like him—more power to him.

Glenna Collett Plays Mrs. Hill for Title

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 28.—(AP.)—Glenna Collett, national champion and Mrs. O. S. Hill, former trans-Mississippi titleholder, will meet in the 18-hole final of the women's invitation golf tournament at the Country Club of Buffalo today. Miss Collett defeated Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, one up yesterday in a match which attracted a gallery of approximately 400 persons. Two down at the turn, Glenna came back to turn the tide in her favor.

Mrs. Hill won her way into the final by defeating Mrs. Leo Federman, of Flushing, L. I., the defending champion, one up in the lower bracket.

Boxer Absolved In Death of Foe

WHEELING, W. Va., June 28.—(AP.)—A coroner's jury ruled that Young Bruno Morasky, Moundsville boxer, died as a result of a cerebral hemorrhage suffered when his head struck the floor at the close of a bout here Monday, and not from the actual blow that sent him to the floor, delivered by his opponent, Earl Bridges, Wheeling. The action was taken on the testimony of physicians.

Morasky was floored as the bell rang to close the final round of his six-round bout with Bridges. He had been leading throughout, and had just sent Bridges down for a count. Bridges arose, swinging as he did so. The blow sent Morasky crashing to the floor.

STEFFEN REFEREE

CHICAGO, June 28. (INS.)—Girl athletes numbering more than 1,100 today began competition in the Central A. A. U. women's track and field meet here. Judge Walter C. Steffen, Carnegie Tech football coach, officiated as referee.

PALMER VICTOR.

Jones Forgets Clubs, Sails Without 'em

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., June 28.—(INS.)—The clubs with which Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., lifted the British amateur and open championships were not with the American golfing ace today as he headed toward America on board the North German Lloyd liner Europa.

The clubs were on the Cunard liner Aquitania in the care of a friend.

Jones, in the excitement of leaving for the United States on the Europa, forgot them. He asked that the clubs be rushed to the Europa. But they missed the sailing of the liner by 10 minutes.

TRANS-MISS. FINAL TODAY

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., June 28.—(AP.)—The trans-Mississippi golf championship will be decided today between Jimmy Manion, of St. Louis, and Bob McCrary, of Des Moines, Ia.

The 36-hole finals will be a duel of champions, Manion having captured the trans-Mississippi title in 1924 and the Iowa boy winning the honor last year at Omaha.

The result of yesterday's semi-final match was just about as expected, Manion's superiority in driving and approaching gave him a 10-to-8 victory over Walter Crooks, former Colorado state champion, and McCrary's steadiness overcame the all-times brilliant Logan Van Zandt, 46-year-old Tulsa campaigner, 8 and 7.

Manion and McCrary were both 4 up on their challengers at the end of the morning 18 and the aspect of the matches never changed in the closing round. Crooks, who had won three consecutive extra-hole matches in reaching the semi-finals, began to crack at the twelfth in the morning.

Solomen, Saylor Fight Slow Draw

NEW BRIGHTON, Pa., June 28.—Mickey Solomen, of New Castle, and Young Saylor, of Charleroi, fought 10 rounds to a draw here last night. Neither fighter seemed able to get going at full speed and the crowd, which had anticipated a scorching contest, was disappointed with the outcome.

In the semi-final, Nick Polin, Aliquippa, knocked out Ed Jacobs, of Canton, O., in the second round. Al Iovino, Pittsburgh, was awarded the decision over Bus Hardy, Beaver Falls, in the second bout at the end of six rounds and in the opening setto Bobby Belford, Rochester, was returned the winner over Tiger Joe Clark, of Pittsburgh.

Andrews, Bruce Draw at Erie

ERIE, Pa., June 28.—(AP.)—Heavy Andrews, Erie, and Sammy Bruce, of Akron, O., fought a 10-roun draw in the main bout here last night. Andrews weighed 141¼, Bruce 147.

Jimmy Taylor, Cleveland, 138, fought a six round draw with Ship Freeman, Salamanca, N. Y., 159.

Frank Bojorski, Erie, 131, won by a technical knockout in the second round of his bout with Barney Davis, Cleveland, 133.

Carl Scalise, Erie, 123, defeated Carner Johns, Miami, Fla., 121, in a four-rounder.

Joe Baier, Erie, 126, won a decision over Johnny Zack, Erie, 127, in another four-rounder.

Radio Editor.

HOW MANY RADIO listeners would make good detectives?

Hear the Wayne Murder Case broadcast over KDKA at 5:20 this afternoon, see if you can pick from it any clues that might help in the solution of Silas Wayne's mysterious murder.

In a vivid, interesting way the Sun-Telegraph will give you the first incidents in this strange slaying—the shrill sound of police whistles, the grilling inquiry in the chilly home, the clerk of typewriters in the newspaper office as Robin Dale is assigned to the story, the shriek of Wayne's daughter-in-law when she sees the slayer reappear after the murder, all these will be presented in gripping detail in this afternoon's broadcast.

Mary Redmond

The story of Silas Wayne's murder will be printed in the Sun-Telegraph starting Monday. Readers will be asked to guess the solution before the final episode is published at the end of the week.

The Ohio River race between the Betsy Anne and the Tom Greene will follow the Wayne Murder Case broadcast. Microphones and short wave transmitters aboard the steamboats will bring detailed story of the finish to KDKA listeners.

Strauss' "My Hero" will be played as a violin solo by Mary Redmond on the WCAE program at 7:30. Miss Redmond is to leave soon for Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., to resume study with Mischa Mischakoff.

Music from "Rose Marie" will feature the Fuller program on KDKA at 7:30.

Three bands will liven festivities—Westinghouse on KDKA at 6, Goldman on KDKA at 8:30 and Arthur Pryor on WCAE at 9:30.

What the governor of North Carolina actually says to the governor of South Carolina may become a matter of radio record next Tuesday afternoon when the microphone functions for KDKA at the annual convention of governors in Salt Lake City.

Silas Wayne's Death Amazes The Witnesses

Can You Outguess ROBIN DALE In MASTER MYSTERIES

Eighteen eyes saw Silas Wayne murdered. Two of them belonged to the murderer, yet none of the other eight pairs of eyes was able to detect how the murder was accomplished, for Silas Wayne collapsed while the nearest person was 10 feet away.

THE WAYNE MURDER CASE is the first of the series of MASTER MYSTERIES, prepared by Arthur Hoerl, criminologist, for the Sun-Telegraph. It and the other stories in the series are divided into six daily installments which give all the clues to the identity of the criminal. The solution will be published a week after the sixth installment appears.

By this arrangement every reader will be able to play the absorbing game of "Who's guilty?" with Robin Dale as his opponent. All the stories play fair with the reader, providing all the clues necessary for a correct solution. You have a week to match your wits with the author.

MASTER MYSTERIES is the most unusual series of detective stories ever written, being based on actual crimes encountered by Hoerl in his career as newspaperman and detective. Yet all are short, all are puzzling and none is dumbfounding.

ROBIN DALE'S first case will be published

THE OFFICE WIFE

Eaton's Wife Tells Him She Wants Divorce

CHAPTER XXI

During that winter Eaton was so busy that he saw little of his wife. Linda was always away somewhere. And it was borne upon him during the first week in March, when she was again at Hot Springs, how little he missed her.

During one night with old friends an especially happy couple he found himself comparing his marriage with theirs. What had been lacking for so long between him and Linda?

They were friends. They respected each other. For a time their only deep tenderness had been physical, a holdover of their original attraction. They had drifted farther and farther apart.

If he and Linda both realized this fact—and surely she must realize it—might it not be possible to go to her and say: "Linda, I've fallen in love with some one else?"

But how did he know she felt as he did? How did he know that she wasn't perfectly contented in her cool way?

But on the same evening his hostess spoke to him seriously, jarring him out of his self-absorption.

"Larry," she said, "forgive me in advance if I overstep the bounds of a long and happy friendship to warn you."

"Just what do you mean?"

"Linda. John and I are devoted to Linda—and to you. And we are so sorry to see things going wrong between you."

But they are not, he denied mechanically. "We're happy. Of course I haven't been able to give Linda the sort of companionship she wants. I'm a busy man, Frances."

"If you don't give it to her some one else will."

Not Too Late

It was entirely in keeping that he took that quietly, did not flare up, grow melodramatic. It wasn't in him. Besides, he knew Linda and trusted her.

"She cares for some one else?" he asked, going straight to the point.

"I don't know.—Frances Marsh's face was troubled.—"but I think so."

Larry Eaton was silent a moment, thinking. "Is it Jameson?" he asked.

"I think so," Mrs. Marsh said unhappily. "They like the same things, they've been thrown together so much. They were with us at Placid this winter—you wouldn't come, Larry, you never do, more's the pity—and I couldn't help seeing. Oh, it was nothing that you could put your finger on. Only, I've known Dick so long and for the last few years—well, he's given up everything, even that old, almost matrimonial entanglement, you remember? And he's always to be found where Linda is. I—I'm not a trouble-maker, Larry. I just want to tell you. It isn't too late."

"Thank you, Frances. Oh, I mean that. I'm not being sarcastic. I've been, I think, a good deal of a fool."

He sat up late that night, thinking, wondering, speculating. Twice he got up to write to his wife a frank, honest letter. "We've made a mess of it, haven't we, dear? Isn't there any way out?"

But he could not.

Anne Becomes Ill

Did he in stark honesty want to begin over again?

He knew that he did not. He knew that he had for Linda no single flame of passionate longing, no spark bright enough to flare up into the ancient fires. And he knew that this quality of emotion lost to him so far as Linda was concerned, still burned within him for another woman.

The question was, what did Linda want? He must put himself and his own desires apart. How far had she really left him. Was she unhappy? And did she care for the man who was no friend and hers?

If she did? If she wanted her freedom?

His heart shook with the natural implication this led to. If she wanted her freedom and he after a decent interval, could go to Anne?

But he couldn't speculate further, not until he knew what Linda wanted.

He did not write Linda. He decided to wait until her return, and during that period Anne had an attack of influenza.

Eaton got along as best he could. But everything went wrong.

To say that he missed her is an inadequate term. He lacked her, achingly in his personal life. He had not fully realized how much her nearness had meant.

In three months of close association he had come to depend on her judgment and reticence. His business mind relied on her to smooth the daily path for him. But what he had not completely realized until she'd gone was that his eyes relied on her too, and his ears, a dependence of the senses.

Eaton Pays Visit

This sense of loss, of a lack irreplaceable until she should return, was the very root of love. This he knew. Knew, too, that the days were long and tiresome and that he came to his work fagged, with little enthusiasm. He made daily inquiries through the office about Anne. Sent novels and flowers, glad of the excuse to do so, and when she'd been absent for 10 days he went to see her.

Perhaps, he told himself, he shouldn't. Yet, a valued employe falls ill; her employer calls upon her. What was out of the way in that? But he was not calling as an employer, perhaps he'd better not.

But he went one night after a lonely, solitary dinner and Molly, who had been staying at the apartment to nurse her daughter, admitted him and they liked each other on sight. Molly saw nothing odd in his visit. Why shouldn't he come to see the poor child?

Anne, convalescent, was sitting in her big chair, a blanket over her knees, a soft satin negligee molded to her lovely figure and one of Kathleen's frivolous pillows behind her head. Eaton recognized instantly and with sharp anxiety how frail she looked, how white and thin. But her old smile flashed to him.

Molly disappeared presently, and as Eaton drew a chair close Anne said:

Anne Wants to Return

"Please smoke. No, I don't mind. How's the office? Have you had a bad time?"

Very bad, he thought, but said aloud, "I get along. Now, don't worry. Who's looking after you?"

"Mother. She put up a cot in here. Kathleen's away evenings, and Mother has no confidence in any one's nursing save her own."

She laughed a little. She was remembering the night Dolly Davis had sent for her and she'd been forced to tell Mrs. Murdock that Betty Howard was ill. What a time she'd had next day over the telephone, telling her not to come to town.

She said, as he watched her, so content to be near her and yet not content, "Monday I'll be back. The doctor won't promise, but I think I can persuade him."

"Don't think of it until you're quite strong. Hadn't you better take your mother and go somewhere to recuperate? South, perhaps?" The office will take care of your expenses." Eaton told her reluctant to delay her return but aching with tenderness, pity and the desire to protect which is the very heart of love.

Yet he wanted to say, "Please come back Monday. I can't do without you."

Anne was saying hurriedly, gratefully: "It's awfully good of you, but I'd rather come back as soon as I can. I'm not used to this elegant idleness."

Mother Likes Eaton

She asked him some questions relative to business, and they talked for a time, rather as business partners do, almost but never quite forgetting that they were man and woman.

Molly returned with hot milk and thin toast for Anne and a cup of coffee and a plate of doughnuts for Anne's boss.

"I thought you'd like a bite," she told him cheerfully, "and then you must go. The child's tired."

"Mother!" expostulated Anne, her white skin tinged with scarlet.

"And are you not? Do you deny it, with your hand shaking so you can scarcely hold the glass?" asked her mother. "You've been up long enough."

"Of course she has." Eaton agreed. He drank the coffee, ate a doughnut or two with appreciation and then rose to depart. The flowers he'd brought were in a vase. Mrs. Murdock had set near Anne.

Anne indicated them. "I haven't thanked you properly for these—or for the lovely ones last week and the books."

"Don't try." He stood close beside her. "Don't do anything but get well. We—miss you so," he admitted.

Then he had gone.

"Nice boy," commented Mrs. Murdock, "and not a bit like what I thought."

"Boy?" asked Anne laughing. "Sure and they're all boys to me the big men, from the cradle to the grave. And the sooner women realize that they grow up but men never do, the better off they'll be and the wiser."

She was no fool, was Molly. She had seen the light in Anne's eyes when Eaton had entered the room, had seen the response in his. And her heart was troubled. Yet she had no misgivings. She thought she knew what she called a decent man when she saw one. She was only sorry for her child.

Linda Wants Divorce

Upon the day Anne came back to the office, Linda returned.

She was looking amazingly lovely. Eaton thought, without the slightest acceleration of his pulse. Bronzed and rosy, her eyes deep velvety brown, eyes like pansies, her lips red with healthy blood. But she was nervous. He had never seen Linda nervous before.

He was determined to speak to her seriously, not about Jameson, but of their own relationship. He had pledged himself to ask her, "Are you unhappy? If so, what can I do to set it right?"

He knew he did not wish to set it right. Yet he was an orderly man, and the complete disruption of anything as important and serious to him as marriage seemed an incredibly grave step. But if Linda wished it, then it should be so. His own happiness demanded that if she wished it he should accede. And surely if she cared for another man nothing was left to them save disruption.

But if she did not care for Jameson and was unhappy in her present life, could he offer himself to her again for her happiness' sake. Could he ask "Shall we start over? I will give up my work, I will go where you wish, be your companion. We will play together; find new grounds of mutual interest."

He knew that he could not thus offer himself. Giving up his work would be suicidal to his soul. It would mean idleness, restlessness, boredom, misery, and it would mean losing Anne—the precious treasurable little he had of her—entirely.

Having reached this mental impasse he sat there in the lovely library watching Linda walk about, finger things, light a cigaret and throw it away. He must ask her—now. He must ask her, "What do you want?"

But suddenly she had answered the unspoken question. For she stopped in front of him and said simply:

"Larry, I want a divorce."

Anne Invites Morgan to Visit Her Home

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Dean Ward Kent, young college graduate, goes to the penitentiary after his automobile, which he was driving while intoxicated, kills two people. In the prison he shares a cell with Duncan Morgan, sentenced for robbery, and "Butch" Schmidt, a hardened criminal, in for murder. Morgan gets possession of a picture of Anne Marlow, which "Butch" has taken from Kent's pocket. He likes her appearance and resolves to meet her some day. Morgan learns that he is to be freed on a parole. Kent "plants" a knife in Morgan's pocket. When the guards find it Morgan is put in solitary confinement and loses the parole. He swears revenge on Kent. After being in a dungeon for 10 days Morgan is almost dead when he is taken out. He is put in the prison hospital. Another prisoner dies in the hospital and Morgan escapes by taking the dead man's place in a huge sack. He jumps from the morgue ambulance on a lonely road and makes his way to friends in a night club, where he hides.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XII.

Anne Marlowe fumbled the letter and Duncan Morgan's face hardened. He knew it was a letter from Dean Kent—he could recognise on the plain white envelope the prison stamp. Still, he felt that the tremor in the girl's voice indicated pity more than love; he instinctively felt it with that keen perspicacity of the lover and the shrewd observer.

"What can be done to get a man out of prison?" Anne asked with earnest innocence. Morgan regained his composure. He sipped his coffee and then shook back.

"That's a tall order, Miss Marlowe," he began. "First an executive pardon from the Governor."

"That's been tried."

"The parole board."

"That, too."

"Nothing?"

"No—he must do his stretch—that is, serve his time—his term. Is it someone you care about—very much?" with hopeful lack of hope.

"—I—don't know. I thought so—once. It's a sort of duty—excuse me, I hear someone in the shop."

Anne hurried out. Morgan smiled happily. He listened idly to the conversation on the other side of the partition.

"Good evening, Miss Marlowe."

"Good evening, Sergeant."

"Sergeant! A cop!"

"I thought I was past your closing time. I tried your door and found it open."

Morgan's first impulse was to escape.

"No, everything's all right. I was just having a cup of coffee before closing the shop."

"Ah, and so you were—it sure smells good on a night like this."

Introduced to Policeman

"Can I offer you a cup?"

"Well, now, Miss—that's mighty kind of you—but—"

Just like a bull!

And Anne Marlowe did insist. Morgan knew that she was now probably afraid to be alone with him. Had he been too hasty—too impulsive? He didn't know how to handle this sort of jane. Maybe he should have been more careful—not so speedy. He heard the heavy clods of the police man approaching the stock room.

Fear again swept through him—terrifying, galvanic. But he must control himself. When they entered he arose casually and smiled complacently—an expression utterly belying the terrific fear in his breast. The policeman, seeing him, hesitated.

"Excuse me, ma'am—I didn't know you had company."

"That's quite all right." Anne hastened to assure him. She waved toward Morgan—"Mr. Everett—Sergeant Donlin." The sergeant held out his great, hardened hand. His blue eyes looked intuitively inquisitively into Morgan's. A habit of coppers! They look that way at everybody. Morgan shook hands leisurely, sinking into his chair.

As the policeman talked he glanced now and then at Morgan. Or maybe Morgan was overconscious. But he managed to conceal his nervousness. Finally Donlin arose and left, and Morgan wheezed a sigh of profound relief as Anne went to let him out.

Morgan Careful

When she returned she showed Morgan plainly that she did not care to continue their conversation, showed him in a polite way, however, by making preparations to close the shop. She took her coat from the hanger and laid it on the chair and Morgan arose to help her. He mustered up courage to say:

"May I see you home, Miss Marlowe—it's rather late."

"Oh, thank you." Anne looked directly into his eyes a bit fearfully. "But my brother is coming for me—I just heard his horn outside."

Morgan was desperate. But he did not want to make a false move.

"You—you were not offended at the way I spoke, were you, Miss Marlowe?"

"I am a bit blunt, perhaps." Morgan was making an imaginary design on the table with his finger.

Anne did not answer.

"I could not hold back what I was saying." Morgan continued, not daring to look at her. "You are so different from the kind of women I have always known—so genuine, so right—"

Anne had picked up her coat. Morgan took it gently from her and held it. He was careful not to allow his hands to touch her in any way as she slid her arms into it. He wanted her to keep what confidence in him could still survive. She thanked him with a glance and assembled the coffee cups.

"I'm not a very good housekeeper," she apologized. "I'm going to let my dishes go until tomorrow."

"Tomorrow's Sunday," reminded Morgan.

"Oh, so it is!" exclaimed Anne. She made as if to say something else, but restrained herself.

Morgan accompanied her to the front of the shop.

"Oh, you didn't get your book!" she exclaimed.

"I'll—I'll take that one by Dusty—what was his name?"

"Oh, Dostoievsky—'Crime and Punishment!'"

"Yes, that's the one."

"It may not be such pleasant reading—for one who likes the Hawaiian Islands."

But there was no ambiguity in her tone.

She was ready now to close the store. Morgan went out the door first. He wanted to fight for every second of their parting. He would not see her until Monday.

"Oh, there's my brother, now!"

Standing at the curb was a small car with a young man at the wheel. He reached over and threw open the door.

"Mr. Everett, my brother."

"Glad to meet you, Mr. Marlowe," greeted Morgan, extending his hand.

They shook hands. Anne got into the car. Morgan still stood, his hand on the door.

A Welcome Invitation

"I'll be in Monday and let you what I think of Crime and Punishment," he said.

"Wouldn't you like to come out and have some supper tomorrow if you can?" Anne's voice trembled.

"Would I?" exclaimed Morgan. "Tomorrow?"

"Sure, tomorrow we live in the suburbs—there's always a crowd—everybody takes potluck and we have a lot of fun, really."

"I'll be there."

Anne Marlowe was writing the address.

"One o'clock," she instructed.

"One! I'll mean just perfect for me. I'll have to leave with bells on."

Anne smiled happily and in her eyes Morgan read something which puzzled him and cheered him. He did not dare to ask himself how he felt. He was head over heels in love. And she who was Morgan had done some big things on a little stage and a lot of concentration.

To Be Continued Monday

Additional Prizes Posted In Davies Contest

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, June 28.—BIG NEWS! TEN ADDITIONAL PRIZES OF $100 EACH FOR THE MARION DAVIES "FLORODORA" CONTESTANTS!

When Miss Davies was told how many thousands of letters had been received, she decided to increase the number of prizes. She thought it only fair that those who sent in exceptionally good letters should have some recognition.

Listen carefully now, while I explain Miss Davies' plan. In addition to the two prizes of $500 each there will be 10 other prizes of $100 each. In other words, the man who has written the best and most intelligent letter with a comparison of the styles of the "gay nineties" and today, will receive $500. The woman who has written the most comprehensive and original letter on the same subject will receive another $500. Then there will be the 10 other lucky winners who will receive $100 each.

In order to facilitate the awarding of these prizes, it has been decided to divide the United States into 10 areas in the following manner:

Pittsburgh area—Ohio, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Washington, D. C. area—District of Columbia, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware.

Boston area—Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

Seattle area—Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho.

California area—California, Nevada, Arizona, Utah and New Mexico.

San Antonio area—Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas.

Atlanta area—Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia and Florida.

New York area—New York and New Jersey.

Omaha area—North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Wyoming, Colorado, Kansas, Iowa and Minnesota.

Chicago area—Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Michigan, Indiana and Kentucky.

In each one of these areas some man or woman will be awarded a prize of $100, so watch the Hearst papers in your section for the announcement.

The contest ended June 14 and no more letters can be accepted. I might add the jury is still out. There were thousands and thousands of letters from every state in the Union and it takes time to read these contributions. We want to give everybody a chance and we want to be sure that every letter is read.

The judges, Eleanor Meherin, Helen Koues, Henry Clive, Amos Parrish and Louella O. Parsons, will announce the awards at the earliest possible moment.

Father Dies

By the time stepmother had been in the home a year Luella was practically running things. Stepmother was loafing most of the time with her fake weak spells and Rita was doing about two-thirds of the work at home.

Luella had plenty of boy friends. She talked about them and told Rita that it was too bad she couldn't grab some nice boy friends—the generous, sporty sort who had cars and took you places.

Rita liked boy friends—she used to know a few. But what with her day's work behind the counter and the drudgery at home she lost interest in boy friends and everything else except getting her tired feet out of her shoes and her tired back on her bed.

And when Rita's father died the poor girl was just out of luck. His small insurance went to his wife—Rita's stepmother. And stepmother claimed all of the household things, which filled the seven rooms in the old-fashioned apartment. More than that, Rita was informed that she must contribute a goodly share of her earnings to the support of the home.

"Home," cried Rita.

Stepmother showed her piratical colors then, and told Rita just where she got off. She could do as she was told or get out.

And Rita was somewhat timid and always tired.

She didn't even dare to mope about the house and have the "good cry" that every woman needs occasionally so she walked across to the park along the drive.

Now we have swung around to the beginning.

The fleet was in and Rita didn't even know it or give the aforedescribed two hoots about it.

She was full of grief, the loss of her father and the inhuman treatment of stepmother was just about all the trouble any decent girl could stagger under.

So Rita groped down a little winding, sharply sloping path and, half-blinded by tears, bumped into someone.

"Avast, there! Avast!" came a cheerful and musical baritone voice.

At the same time the man reached out and took hold of Rita's arm.

"Oh!" said Rita, and then, "Let go of me, you big sap!"

The powerful searchlights on the battleships were swinging here and there to make the display. One of the lights at this moment swung around full in Rita's face.

Tells of Her Troubles

Weeping had made her eyes a trifle red, but with the light on her she seemed mighty attractive.

"What's up, kid? Don't be scared—I wouldn't eat you," the sailor said. Rita has seen through wet eyes that the man was a sailor, only she thought of him as a "Gob."

"N-never mind," stammered Rita.

MY STARS GEORGE. WHERE WERE YOU UNTIL AFTER ONE OCLOCK IN THE MORNING? YOU LOOK AS THOUGH YOU SPENT ALL EVENING TRAMPING AROUND IN THIS RAIN TO FIND THOSE MOVIE MEN WHO-
ABOUT EIGHT OCLOCK I HEARD THEY SETTLED WITH MY LAWYER. THEN I SPENT THE REST OF THE EVENING TRYING TO FIND HIM.
FINE STUFF. THE MOST IMPORTANT PARTY IN THIS SETTLEMENT KNOWS THE LEAST ABOUT IT. I SPENT ALL NIGHT DROPPING NICKELS IN PHONES, AND HALF DOLLARS INTO TAXI DRIVERS HANDS, TRYING TO FIND THOSE MOVIE PEOPLE- OR MY LAWYER.
IMAGINE YOU GETTING MONEY FOR JUST NOTHING. HOW MUCH DID THEY PAY?
WELL I DON'T KNOW EXACTLY BUT THIS LAST LAWYER TALKED ABOUT SUING FOR $250,000. IF HE SETTLED FOR ONLY, SAY, 10¢ ON THE DOLLAR, AND THAT WOULD BE SIMPLY TERRIBLE. I'D GET $25,000.
$25,000! THINK OF IT. AND FOR NOTHING AT ALL!
$25,000! WHAT A LOT OF MONEY!
IT MAY BE MORE. $50,000... OR $75,000. I'M NOT WORRIED ABOUT THAT PART OF IT. WHAT REALLY THRILLS ME IS THE IDEA OF THAT LAWYER WALKING AROUND AFTER DARK WITH THAT MUCH OF MY MONEY IN HIS POCKETS. MY WORD, I HOPE NOTHING HAPPENS TO HIM. SUCH LUCK. WELL ANYHOW GET ME UP AT DAY-BREAK, IF I HAPPEN TO FALL ASLEEP.

A Challenge to the Mothers of America!

WASHINGTON. — In order to prove that home brews are injurious to the system, Horace Frisby, Congressman - at - Large, yesterday announced he would subject himself to the most exacting test. "I will sample various home brews every day from now until September first. I will then tour the country, lecturing on the bad effects I expect to suffer. All I ask is that the mothers of America send in samples of the injurious malt brews they are forced to make to satisfy their husbands' greed. The Anti-Saloon League, if it so desires, will be permitted to share in the experiment by merely paying my traveling expenses."

Mr. Hoover said train loads like that passed every day and he didn't aim to hire any carpenter to count the cars.

Some Things Pittsburghers Are Talking About.

The killing of a 7-year-old boy by a "hit-and-run" driver on the Freeport road is reported, one of a number of recent cases in which autoists, after striking persons, fled before their identity was learned. These cases present a challenge to detectives no less urgent than the challenge in exciting murder mysteries, and the culprits should be hunted down relentlessly.

It speaks well for District Attorney Andrew T. Park that he did not disregard a letter complaining about lawlessness on the North Side, as he might have done, because the identity of the writer was not fully disclosed. Anonymity of timid complainants often serves as an excuse for ignoring troublesome complaints. Park has done well to investigate the charges.

East Ohio street is promised a system of street lights similar to that planned for downtown Fifth avenue, recognition thus being given to the importance of the North Side thoroughfare. The fact is that at night the Golden Triangle is by no means Pittsburgh's only gay district. Indeed, a stranger, being taken to Penn avenue in East Liberty, between Highland and Frankstown, in the evening, and also to downtown Fifth avenue, might easily imagine the East End business district to be the city's night life center.

The Vital Statistics Division of the Department of Commerce reports there were 11,245 fewer births in Pennsylvania last year than in 1928. If that seems to be bad news and disturbing, here is a piece of cheerful news to counterbalance it: The State Health Department announces the number of deaths of babies under one year of age in 1929 was by far the lowest on record. As between more babies and healthier babies it is not hard to make a choice.

Dr. Robert Clarke, vice president of Geneva College, is to be respected for desiring, on applying for naturalization, to add to the required oath to support the Constitution and laws of the United States the words "so far as they are in accord with the moral laws of Jesus Christ." Nevertheless, it was right that he be denied citizenship on those terms. It is hard to see how anyone could argue otherwise after reading the Supreme Court's decision, written by Justice John W. Kephart, in which Judge McConnell, of Beaver County, is upheld in refusing naturalization to Dr. Clarke.

Pittsburghers, on the average, eat almost twice as much candy as persons in other cities, according to the National Confectioners' Association. That speaks well for our abstemiousness as to liquor, if a theory put forth about the time prohibition went into effect carries weight. It had been observed, it was said, that when drinkers went on the "water wagon" they developed a sweet tooth, and candy makers predicted a big demand for confectionery from persons giving up liquor.

After all the questions that have been raised and the charges made as to the safety of the Liberty Tubes, it is gratifying to receive the clear-cut statement of George E. Clarkson, of the Better Traffic Committee, on the subject. What he says is reassuring, but to make assurance doubly sure he gives some common sense advice, which should be heeded. The principal possibility of danger lies in a jam, and it will be no more than prudent to keep traffic out of the tunnels if cars in the tubes should be halted for any reason.

Work has been started on 34 city construction projects for which contracts recently were awarded. That is good news, for it means employment for a number of men. Every public construction job that can be done now should be done, including the Town Hall, the river-rail terminals, and the new postoffice.

A circle of boys and girls at the Soho Community House are committing poems to memory. Several of the group have memorized 100, and everyone has learned at least 10. Provided it is done with pleasure, and not under any sort of coercion, the learnings of the poems will give the children an asset that will be of considerable cultural value to them throughout their lives. Forcing children to commit things to memory is another matter. How many have come actually to hate the Bible because of the mistaken practice of parents of another generation of requiring children to memorize Scripture verses as a punishment for wrongdoing?

New records for speedy transportation of freight, made recently by Pittsburgh division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, are impressive. There has been steady increase in the number of gross ton miles per train hour, and the average speed of freight movements has jumped to 10.1 miles per hour. Rivermen had figures a few years ago showing freight could sometimes be shipped more swiftly by water than by rail. But that would not be true if all railroads handled goods as rapidly as the Pennsylvania's Pittsburgh division.

'Chuck' Klein Wins Fame In a Few Short Years

Several years ago a 19-year-old boy named Charles Klein was starting the serious phase of life as an obscure laborer in an Indianapolis steel mill. Nicknamed "Chuck," this broad-shouldered lad of smiling countenance could play baseball a bit beyond the skill of his sandlot buddies. In a year or more he had won a berth with a Central League team.

Today "Chuck" Klein, still under 25, is the holder of the National League record for home runs, a feat he achieved in his first full year in the majors. A member of the Philadelphia Nationals, he is alloted more space each day than the mayor of the great city he represents on the diamond.

In every town in the league this youth's autograph is sought by hundreds of boys who look up to him as a hero.

Where, but in America, could such a meteoric rise to fame be achieved?

"Bugs" Baer Says:

From Yeast to Wet

Since New Jersey skidded from yeast to wet every politician in the land is rushing down to the lumber yards to order a new plank.

"Bugs" Baer

That's the biggest thing that's happened in Jersey since Washington threw a dollar across the Hotel Potomac bar.

Of course, the victor is Dwight Morrow, a distinguished man of letters and plenty of stamps. He is the popper-in-law of Lindy, the only hero who never made a blindfold test.

Mr. Morrow had three opponents running against him in the opposite direction. There is no hesitation about his speeches.

He goes straight to the pint.

Incidentally, the news reels are putting over some plain and fancy diplomacy on the drys. Each week you hear a prominent prohibitionist mumbling loudly on the screen.

He starts by saying: "Ladies or gentlemen, you all know that prohibition is such a success in America that we are thinking of building another brewery."

That's about as far north as he gets. Some rascal in the audience chops loose with some very sarcastic asthma. In the old country we used to call it hissing.

Hissing a news reel is great sport. The dryster continues talking because he doesn't know that his speech is as popular as a Marine at a sailors' picnic.

Just when the prohib is telling what a wonderful thing the Eighteenth Amendment is for falling arches, some citizen in the balcony hollers:

"Aw, pull in your neck, the ceiling's too low."

That's the first time we ever heard anybody talking back to a talking picture. It gives you an idea of the commercial value of Einstein's new theory.

Answering a talking picture is the height of un-employment.

But it's a lot of fun and happy days. The audience grabs the hissing monopoly. It got so contagious that we started in to turn on the steam also.

We made funny noises at the bone-dry on the screen. But he kept right on scolding in a jolly way that indicated he must have thought he was home.

The audience finally started throwing fountain pens, hats, and coins at the talking picture. It looks as if the pendulum has swung back and knocked the cuckoo out of the clock.

Ten years ago they used to cheer the drys. It seemed like a good idea at the time, as Wilhelm said when he started the war.

DRAMA OF MODERN SCIENCE

By Archibald Henderson

The era of modern scientific development may be said, roughly, to cover the past century and a half. Many and spectacular have been the scientific achievements of this wonderful period. Yet certain inventions and discoveries stand out with dramatic conspicuousness, like beacons along the pathway of progress and enlightenment. These beacon lights of science have been accentuated in the recent pageant of engineering, presented under the direction of Prof. George Pierce Baker, of Yale, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers at Stevens Institute, on April 7 last.

First, we are shown the crucial moment in James Watt's career. The year is 1772, when the inventor is 36. He was intent upon improving the imperfect steam engine, already invented. By cooling or condensing the steam in a separate chamber, keeping the cylinder hot and admitting steam to lower the closed-top piston, Watt effected the necessary improvements which constitute the fundamentals of every steam engine. By taking over an interest in Watt's invention, just when the young inventor was in despair, Boulton laid the foundation of the engineering firm of Boulton & Watt, which produced the first commercially successful steam engine.

Another dramatic scene in the pageant shows George Stephenson before a parliamentary committee, pleading for a charter for the proposed Liverpool and Manchester Railway. In face of a storm of ridicule, Stephenson predicts: "I think you will live to see the day when railroads will supercede almost all methods of conveyance in this country—when mail coaches will go by railway and railroads will become the great highway for the king and all his subjects. The time is coming when it will be cheaper for a working man to travel upon a railway than to walk on foot." In this year, 1825, steam-propelled trains actually traveled at the dizzy speed of six miles per hour! Stephenson ultimately triumphed, built the Liverpool and Manchester Railroad, and constructed the famous engine, Rocket, which won first prize in the contest of October, 1829.

Another important episode of the pageant is concerned with Robert Fulton and his steamboat, the Clermont, which carried one of the Watt & Boulton steam engines. On this famous trip of the Clermont Fulton predicted: "When we land in Albany, we shall have proved that here we have cheap and quick conveyance for the merchandise of the Mississippi, Missouri and other great rivers which are now laying open their treasure to the enterprise of our countrymen."

Not the least impressive scene shows Faraday conducting one of his revolutionary experiments. A fortune was promised him, on the one hand; the presidency of the Royal Society was offered him on the other. He preferred to devote himself singly and unreservedly to the pursuit of science for its own sake.

Three dramatic moments in the drama of modern science, each of which was in a sense an inevitable consequence of Faraday's discoveries, are shown in the pageant. These deal respectively with Samuel F. B. Morse and the telegraph, Alexander Graham Bell and the telephone and Guglielmo Marconi and wireless transmission across the Atlantic. The pageant, fittingly enough, closed with the turning on of the current in the old Edison headquarters in Manhattan. The electric bulb, the subdivision and distribution of the electric current, was the end of the pageant, but the beginning of the contemporary light age.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The way is hard—and I am torn by doubt,
Confused by theories, dulled by the long grind
Of work and worry, loneliness and grief.
God, can You hear above this dust and din?
They say You once were man and knew man's pain—
Can you remember that far agony,
And, out of pity, grant this prayer to me?
Give me a quiet spot within my soul—
Like a green refuge in the forest's heart,
Walled round with silence, dim and sweet and cool—
Where I can hide myself, sometimes, away
From all the heat and clamor of my life.
A quiet spot, where memories may come
As dappled deer come down the forest aisles,
Drifting like shadows through the sun shot gloom,
So may my memories pass, without a pang,
Leaving me quickened by their loveliness.
Then, as a weary traveler slips within
The still, green crystal of some forest pool,
So may I slip within a pool of peace
And cleanse myself of all the dust of strife
And hate and greed and prickling conceit,
And then lie still—forgetful for a while
Of my silk Self, and all its noisy doubt
So, dreaming, may I slowly come to feel
Your friendly Presence, brooding all about—
And catch some shining glimpse of Your great plan,
And, for an instant, feel my hand in Yours.
Because You were a man and knew man's pain,
Because You were a man and knew man's fear,
And all man's tire and loneliness and grief,
Give me this secret spot, where I may rest.
Then, having rested, help me go once more
To face the challenge of this thing called life,
And make as good a showing as I may,
In those hard tasks You've given me to do.
This is my prayer. Grant it, I pray, Oh God,
For once, they tell me You were tired too.

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

There was an American visiting in a country town in England, and the American was making everybody's eyes stick out, telling them how tall the Chrysler Building is and how fast the subways run and everything. One day the talk was about marriage and divorce. The American says, "In New York, you know, a couple is divorced every 50 minutes."

"I don't believe that one," says one of the listeners to another. "You know they'd soon get tired of that kind of 'orse play and quit being married altogether!"

Philosophy

Philosophy is sober stuff
And life is never long enough
To learn what it would teach.
So hidden are its subtle ways,
So secret is its devious maze,
So far its windings reach.

But when through forests deep I tread,
With tall pines singing overhead,
And dogwood boughs all white,
Or when I walk beside the sea,
I hear strange voices speak to me
Across the star-strewn night.

Philosophy seems cold, remote,
And lessons from a linnet's throat
Bring more of good to me;
I hold that June some way knows
More surely how to cure man's woes
Than all philosophy.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

Sec. 7. Mapping the Chromosomes

We have already written of the remarkable confidence with which the Geneticist can display a map of the chromosomes of such a creature as Drosophila and localize and identify the genes thereon.

H. G. Wells

Genetics is a science with all the attractiveness and perhaps some of the defects of hardy youth. It has been developed with extreme enthusiasm in the last quarter of a century and it has achieved very brilliant results.

But there is a Wonderland touch about some of its claims and assertions that holds back many of the maturer biologists from complete acquiescence in all its enthusiasms.

Meanwhile we record the marvel of this mapping of the chromosomes of Drosophila. Marvel it is. These things we describe here with such detail and exactness are visible only with the highest power of the microscope.

We are dealing with forms that would make the finest fairy that was ever imagined seem a colossal monster of clumsiness in comparison.

Never has the reader's unassisted eye seen anything so fine and small as the reality we here enlarge for him.

In the various species of the Fruit-fly Drosophila, easy to breed, easy to observe and rich in varieties, Morgan and his indefatigable associates have been able to explore the behavior of over 400 genes.

In addition there must be an unknown number of true breeding genes which have as yet given no variations to betray their nature. In the cells of this genus of fly there are only four pairs of chromosomes.

It has been shown, by an elaborate process of experiment and reasoning, that these 400 and more genes are crowded in a chain along the chromosomes. They are not strung together anyhow, it would seem, but arranged along the chromosome in a fixed definite order.

The reduction division of the germ-cells of Drosophila to form the gametes has been watched and recorded in great detail. As we know already the chromosomes then come together in pairs instead of splitting.

Now the pairs that so unite are always the corresponding pairs. The description of cell-division in Chapter 2 may seem marvelous enough, but we did not go then into the full intricacy of this delicate process.

In this Fruit-fly the two little blobby chromosomes pair, the two shorter rods pair and the long V-shaped chromosomes pair, each with its corresponding fellows of the other set.

At the reduction division each daughter-cell gets one member of each pair and thus it is ensured that each of the resulting gamets shall get one complete outfit.

The same is true of the chromosome of many other creatures. Moreover, the chromosomes during the pairing process lie in very accurately dovetailed apposition, even the individual corresponding genes of the members of a pair being opposite to each other.

And sometimes they twist a little round each other, like Hermes' snakes, while they are writhing in the nucleus in the early stages of the reduction-division.

Even the minutest details of these microscopic juxtapositions are accurately reflected in the subsequent inheritance. In the first place, if two genes are placed in the chromosomes they will tend to be handed on together from generation to generation.

The units which are handled and dealt out on the spindle of a dividing cell are chromosomes, not genes. The genes go in bundles. In the case of the tall yellow-seeded and short green-seeded peas, the height gene and the seed-color gene are in different chromosomes.

If they were in the same chromosome we should expect the original pairs with which we started to reappear in the second cross-bred generation, and that the tall plants with green seeds and the dwarf plants with yellow seeds would not appear.

However, as a matter of fact we learn from this Drosophila work that this linkage of genes which are carried by the same chromosome is by no means complete.

When the pairing chromosomes curl round each other they may exchange bits of themselves. They may come unstuck along a rather different line from that in which they met.

Thus the genes are shuffled around and appear in ever-changing combinations even when they are carried by the same chromosomes.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

LE HAVRE: The Normandy coast, as usual, was misty with a thin drizzle when the boys and girls ended the six-day buggy ride and began to disembark, Le Havre, despite a heavy mistral, at 6 a. m. was bustling. It is a seaport and "a big ship was in." Custom inspection is casual.

Under the great landing shed the dinky continental train with its peanut-stand whistle was waiting. Tourists have heard much of the brigandage of porters at Havre and Cherbourg. A single porter carried all our hand luggage from the ship to the train compartment and bestowed a gracious "Merci, monsieur!"

His tip was 15 francs—or 60 cents. Four porters carried the same luggage from the curb to the ship edge—a shorter distance—in New York and at a cost of $2, and if one of them stopped long enough to bestow a hasty thank-you it entirely escaped me. And I'm a hound for such details.

My method of packing is somewhat like Noel Coward's. I stuff all my belongings in a suit case and then clip off the edges. I left on the steamer one pocket lighter, a bright yellow steamer cap and a left Russian red house boot.

The boat train starts with a quick lurch when a rheumatic old man pops out of nowhere and runs up and down along the track ringing a hand bell. Those not aboard when he makes his sudden appearance are left behind. We whirled by three amazed passengers sampling bottled beer from a portable cart.

An ancient philosopher has observed that the prosperity of a country can be estimated by its new roofs. Judging from that standard France is on the up and up. Havre and the surrounding country fairly glisten with freshly placed roof tops. A good year for roofers, anyway. And mimosa is in bloom.

The conductor with winey red cheeks and a sour winey breath seemed pleased the dog occupied one of the seats. There was a charge of $1 when he collected and which I do not believe will ever find its way to the coffers of the chemin de fer etat. But conductors must live. Or think they must.

In our compartment was a bright blonde whose fingernails were lacquered an ebony black. Her gown, too, was black, as was her cloche hat. I almost expected to see her teeth beetled to complete the picture. She spoke to the conductor in a rapid foreign tongue and lit a black-tipped cigaret. Henry Bell suggested she might be a crepe hanger by occupation.

It is interesting to watch a group of passengers glare at each other when they take their places in the compartment of a continental train. Invariably they seem ready to fly at each others throats. But after they ride awhile they find they want to play pat-a-cake and not kill each other at all. Some of the greatest and most enduring friendships of travelers have begun in these haphazard meetings.

One of my best friends in France is a perfumer who quarreled with me seven years ago over room in the overhead baggage space of a boat train. We were both wrong, admitted it, snapped into a waltz and every time I come to Europe we exchange Alphonse and Gaston calls.

All through the Normandy fields are glaring signs: "Visit Egypt!" The unseasonable weather of the Riviera has killed its popularity, at least temporarily. Monte Carlo has had the worst season in history as have other resorts on the Southern coast. On the other hand, winter sports at St. Moritz and in the Swiss Alps are attaining an amazing social following.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

There are too many who want to be known as good fellows. Are you one?

Do you fail to support your convictions, to stand by a certain principle that all your life has seemed to you to be right and just?

Do you avoid opposition because you fear censure?

You are afraid to antagonize and so you allow another to lead you in most matters.

You would resent being called cowardly but it applies to the course you take.

You have demonstrated a certain kind of physical bravery in the past.

You were unafraid when duty led to hazardous undertakings.

But mere physical bravery is not the only kind worth while.

There are times and conditions when it is infinitely harder to stand up for a principle than it would be to face the cannon's mouth.

The serious results which may come as an aftermath of opposing friends in defense of what you know should be your standards often requires more nerve than a matter of mere physical daring.

Throughout your life haven't you tried to retain your friends regardless of and even though you lost your self respect?

If so, you make too great sacrifices for popularity and it is not worth it.
